EDEN VISIT TO MOSCOW BIG SUCCESS

MISGIVINGS ARE LESSENER

CO-OPERATION ASSURED

Moscow, Yesterday.

Mr. Anthony Eden, the Lord Privy Seal, is observing the Soviet rest-day along with many Government officials. He is having no official conversations, though presumably continuing informal chats with M. Litvinoff at the latter's country home.

It is already apparent that the visit has achieved a considerable measure of success. Those Russians who have made contact with Mr. Eden are delighted with his frank, informal manner and his visit has removed many clouds of suspicion.

"CHILDREN'S DAY" IN CANTON

Extensive Programme Arranged

Canton, Yesterday.

The Provincial and Municipal Tangpu, the Provincial Department of Education, and the Municipal Education Bureau are now rushing preparations for the celebration of Children's Day, next Thursday.

At the meeting held yesterday by the representatives of the above mentioned organisations, the programme decided upon is as follows: A meeting to be held in the Chungshan Memorial Hall at 9 o'clock; a review of boy scouts at 10 o'clock; a children's carnival; a Mandarin oral contest for children; and school children's costume parade.—Central Press.

MR. ARIYOSHI DESIRES TO GIVE WAY TO YOUTH

Tokyo, Yesterday. — The Nichi Nichi Shinbun states that Mr. Ariyoshi, Japanese Minister to China, has informally requested permission to retire shortly to make way for a younger man.—Reuter.

H.R.H. the Duke of Kent, named by Gladys, "most beautiful girl in the world," as one of the 10 handsomest men in the world, is seen in swimming trunks aboard the s.s. Duchess of Richmond while on his honeymoon cruise to Lesser Antilles.

RED MENACE AT AN END IN N. KWANGTUNG

COMMUNIST LEADER IN FLIGHT

OTHER LEADING OFFICERS EXECUTED

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Canton, Yesterday.

The Communist menace to Northern Kwangtung has now been concluded by the flight of Yeh Chien-chen, the notorious Communist leader, and the execution of Li Pao-chieh, a member of the Central Executive Committee of the Soviet regime.

Li was captured by the troops of the First Kwangtung Army and was sentenced to death, following a brief court martial at Taiyu. Four other Communist chiefs were executed together with Li. All of them were educated in Soviet Russia. Li was outstanding among the group and could speak fluent French and German having been partly educated in those two countries.

SPECIAL POWERS GRANTED TO NEW GOVERNMENT

Brussels, Yesterday.

The Finance Committee of the Chamber yesterday approved, by 16 votes to 8, with one abstention, a bill embodying the Government's monetary decisions.

M. van Zeeland's Government had its first success in the Chamber last night when the provisional credits were voted by 135 to 11.

A LATER MESSAGE FROM BRUSSELS STATES THAT THE CHAMBER, BY 107 VOTES TO 53, AFTER AN ALL-NIGHT SITTING APPROVED THE SUSPENSION OF THE GOLD STANDARD AND THE DEVALUATION OF THE FRANC. IT ALSO GRANTED THE GOVERNMENT SPECIAL POWERS FOR ONE YEAR.

Twelve members abstained from voting and half the Catholics and half the Liberals voted against the Government.—Reuter.

EXHIBITION OF MODERN CHINESE ART

Paintings On View In London Gallery

HIGH PRAISE FROM CRITIC OF "THE TIMES"

London, Yesterday.

The exhibition of modern Chinese paintings at the New Burlington Galleries gave more than a hint that the spirit which still informs the world's most ancient civilisation has now fallen into confusion, declares "The Times" in a leading article, so that a clear glimpse of that civilisation may perhaps serve as a reminder that on the solution of the problems of China depend not only trade, customs, revenues, concessions and investments, but in face of a civilisation which must be understood before it can be saved, the efforts of the West to help China will not succeed unless they are actuated by a knowledge not only of the wealth but of the culture of China.

Bank Of China Takes $15,000 More

SHAREHOLDERS AGREE

Shanghai, Yesterday. The Bank of China shareholders, at a meeting this afternoon, decided to accept the additional Government share of the currency loan bonds amounting to $15,000,000, bringing the total Government shares in the bank up to $20,000,000, which is equal to its commercial shares.

Accordingly, the bank's constitution has been revised to accommodate an increase from 15 to 21 in its directors, among whom are nine Government appointees, including Mr. T. V. Soong, while the supervisors have been increased from five to seven, among whom are three Government appointees.—Reuter.

DARK BLUES GREAT CHANCE

London, Yesterday.

The Cambridge University boat race crew had a full course trial today from Mortlake to Putney, covering the distance in 20 minutes 12 seconds, which was 41 seconds slower than the Oxford crew's effort yesterday.

Little importance, however, is attached to the comparative times in view of the great difference in the conditions, which were almost perfect for the Oxford trial, but which today were rough and windy.—Reuter.

The Cambridge crew is—A. D. Kingsford (Uppingham and Pembroke) (bow), 12 3/4; J. H. C. Powell (Eton and Third Trinity) (12 7/8); D. G. Kingsford (Uppingham and Pembroke) (12 11/16); M. P. Lomson (Westminster and Third Trinity) (12 13/16); T. Wilson (Shrewsbury and Pembroke) (12 15/16); W. G. R. M. Laurie (Monkton Combe and Salway) (13 1/16); T. R. M. Bristolow (Dulwich and Pembroke) (13 1/16); E. A. Skilgavi (St. Paul's and Jesus) (stroke) (13 1/16); J. N. Duckworth (Lincoln and Jesus) (cox) (13 7/8).

2 THUNDERSTORMS

Heavy Rain Falls During Night

Hong Kong, which is not often troubled with thunderstorms, had a short, sharp visitation last night, half a dozen brilliant flashes of lightning, some of which were observed to strike the Peak, occurring about 9.40, accompanied with loud crashes of thunder. Heavy rain fell for about 10 minutes.

Thereafter the weather cleared, but at 1.30 this morning another storm passed over the island, bringing more rain with it.

WEATHER FORECAST

A strong anticyclone covers central China, and is extending eastward. A trough of relatively low pressure extends from Indo-China to Luzon. The local forecast for to-day, as issued by the Royal Observatory last night, was spat winds, fresh to moderate; overcast, drizzle or light rain.

ASSASSINATION OF EXECUTIVES AND TERRORISM

DAIREN AGOG WITH EXCITEMENT

CONSPIRATORS WAIT ON JUNKS

POLICE ON ALERT

Dairen, Yesterday.

Dairen is agog with excitement at the alleged discovery of a plot by 23 Korean malcontents to assassinate the Emperor Kang Teh and prominent Manchukuo and Japanese civil and military officials and to perpetrate nation-wide acts of destruction.

The conspirators are stated to be waiting aboard junks in the hope of entering the three eastern provinces undetected at various points.

All police stations have been instructed to keep a close watch.—Reuter.

Manchukuo was one year old on March 1 and Emperor Kang Teh, the former Henry Pu Yi, was feted throughout Manchuria in official observances on that occasion.

Emperor Kang Teh is expected to leave Changchun for Japan on Tuesday, and is expected to remain in Japan for 18 days.

He will start his journey to Japan from the South Manchuria Railway station in Haikang, and will be accompanied by officials of the government, officials of the Imperial Household and retainers, totalling nearly 150.

SHORT STORY

From Snow To Slush

By JOSEPH H. COLE

I JOINED the waiting line at its tail. There were at least six people in front of me. They were all rather smartly dressed, and a little aloof. In this marble theatre lobby on this rich red rug I was glad the weather called for rubbers, for they covered my shabby shoes and were new. My wife and I hadn't been to the theatre (barring a few movies) for a long time. This was going to be my Christmas present to us. The critics had more or less chosen it to be the finest production of the season; the "Times" devoted a full page to it in their Sunday supplement.

Christmas Eve fell on a Sunday, and so the tickets would have to be for Saturday; I looked at the scale of prices. In the evening, the mezzanine would cost two and a half dollars. We prefer the mezzanine because it offers a fine perspective of the stage and yet is within audibility, and we do not care for matinees as they are usually attended by women's clubs.

What I wanted was two in the mezzanine for the evening of the twenty-third.

Then the question of money came up. Five dollars was quite a lot to be spent on just a show. Of course it was Christmas and we were young and we did have a right to some pleasure—yet five dollars was almost a week's rent. There were cheaper seats, of course, but when I see a show I like to see and hear it, not stretch to see it not strain to hear it. And so, with a sinking midriff feeling of desperation, I stuck to parting with the five.

By this time the line had been greatly reduced and I was within pecking distance of the girl in the box-office. She was quietly pretty. In a blonde, Junior League fashion. She seemed to be losing patience. The old fellow in front of her couldn't make up his mind whether he ought to take one in the eighteenth on the side for that night or one in the centre balcony for the following afternoon.

I smiled in sympathy with her and made sure that I knew what I wanted. Two in the mezzanine for the night of the twenty-third. A right! I took out the five that represented our last month's savings and which should have gone into the bank. Then I gazed at the girl in calmer confidence. "I was next."

The blonde head turned its blue eyes upon me inquisitively. I was nervous; I didn't want to stammer or take up too much time.

But I managed to say my little speech quite clearly, if none too steadily.

"It's a relief," she said, "to find somebody who knows what he wants." And she smiled upon me.

I gave her my five dollars and took the tickets which she had placed in a small envelope.

"Thank you," I murmured, and left the theatre.

It was well that the girl had smiled and spoken to me so prettily, for it spared me a lot of uneasiness I might otherwise have felt. Normally, while waiting for our date to approach, I would start to regret spending so much money on a mere two hours of mummery. But this was not the case now. Whenever my mind turned to the play, it plunged itself upon the fact that the pretty blonde girl had smiled upon me. It may sound foolish, but that cashier's smile brightened four weeks of my life.

My wife laughs at me for worrying so much; she is so practical that she has eliminated thinking about things—she just goes ahead and does them. When I told her I had bought the tickets, she felt I had been extravagant, however, the money was spent and she allowed no regrets to spoil her pleasure. Grace loves the theatre even more than I; she is too practical not to get her money's worth.

We both wanted this to be the happiest Christmas of our lives, for it would be the first we would spend together—we had been married less than a year. Avidly, we read every review of the play we could lay our hands upon. When a magazine damned it with faint praise, I felt rather weak and tried to dismiss the haunting paragraphs from mind. Not even the memory of my smiling blonde could make me cheerful. But when we read that the work was a triumph and that it would probably go down to posterity as one of the finest American plays, then we smiled at each other in silent pleasure.

When the day finally came, we were all ready to do what the fashion magazines call "stepping out." I had received a cast-off suit from a thoughtful relative, and the tailor had altered it into an almost adequate fit. It was a little baggy under the sleeves, and the coat was somewhat too long, but the general effect was quite tasty. I did not polish my shoes, but spent ten cents for a shine plus a five cent tip. I wanted to do things in the grand manner. Grace, too, wore her best clothes, but I believe that I was more conscious of her worn shoes than she was. She merely shrugged and said if she were to worry about such things there'd be no sense in going at all.

It started to snow just as we left the house. We were pleased; it would be a white Christmas before getting on the subway, I made one last magnificent gesture: I bought Grace a corsage of sweet-peas. I even wore a white rose-bud as a boutonniere.

The performance began at 8.30, but we always make it a point to be at least half an hour early. We like to stay as long as possible in the soft and mellow atmosphere of plush and carpets. It always gives us a thrill to be conducted to our seats, to glance at the programme, and then to go out into the lounge where one can smoke and talk and laugh and watch the other playgoers.

This night, however, the clock on the bureau had been ten minutes slow. I hurried Grace from the subway station and we reached the theatre at 8.15. Those lost fifteen minutes made me feel as though I had been cheated of fifteen dollars.

As we entered the lobby, I was saying to Grace, "It's too bad we can't have the right time in the house!"

She looked at me in that pert way of hers and giggled, "You ought to be happy now; you've got something to worry about."

I grinned, but I really was upset and I reached into my waistcoat pocket for our tickets.

"I beg your pardon, but have you good seats for to-night?"

Startled, I turned around. A rather tall, sophisticated young man was looking questioningly at me.

He was in impeccable full dress, and I saw that the young lady with him was likewise tall, smart and "dressed to kill," as they say. She had a sparkling diadem in her coil-fure and a corsage of three beautiful orchids.

I drew myself up proudly. "Why, yes. We have two in the first row centre mezzanine." I rather enjoyed saying that—after all, we were not paupers.

Now that I took back, I suppose I was foolish to be so sensitive; but a man can't help his feelings.

He looked at the scale of prices.

"They cost you five dollars. The box-office and speculators are sold out. I'll give you twenty for them."

No, I said to myself, no. Twenty dollars, I said to myself, twenty dollars. Hell! I thought, no! Four hundred per cent. No, I'll be damned if I will (him with his fancy clothes). We planned to see the show. I can see it later I wanted to see it to-night. No, I said to myself, no.

Well, what are you waiting for?" asked Grace. "Give him the tickets."

"No, dear, it isn't worth it."

"I'll give you twenty-five," he said.

My god, I hated him! Twenty-five dollars for tickets! Who ever heard of such a thing? Grace could get shoes; I could get a few ties. Our first Christmas—

"Here—"

Grace snatched the ticks from my hand.

"It's a deal," she said.

"Thank you," he said, giving her the money, "and a Merry Christmas."

Then he turned around to his lovely lady.

"Didn't I tell you I'd get them?" He was quite pleased.

"What a price!" she said.

"It didn't mean any more to me than their five did to them."

He laughed as he handed my tickets to the doorman.

I could have cried.

I managed to smile at Grace.

"Well," I said, "you made 500 per cent on that."

She pressed my hand. "I'm sorry, dear, but we simply couldn't afford to turn it down." She went over to silent pleasure.

WOMEN THROUGH WOMEN'S EYES

DO men appreciate intelligent and reasonable wives, or do they like their womenfolk to be fanciful? Opinions seem divided on this subject, according to the following extracts from new novels by women writers.

Jane Heathcote in "Before the Mirror" (John Long, 7s. 6d.):

"It was nice to know that his wife was a typical woman, with fads and fancies and whims, and generally in the wrong."

"Biddy Worger in "Dusky Ladies" (Saunders Lowy, 7s. 6d.):

"No woman should be as intelligent as her husband."

Lettice Cooper in "We Have Come to a Country" (Gollancz, 7s. 6d.):

"He had often been glad of her sane reasonableness, for he had had a theory, before he married, that women were full of inexplicable moods and sudden whims."

NEW CREPES IN FRESH GARDEN HUES

THE new crepes and linens, rough and smooth, plain or printed, are offered in the most lovely range of fresh garden hues. The pale pinks and blues, the latter from that chalky love-in-the-mist tone to the most brilliant delphinium shades, offer a very extensive range in blues. Fuchsia tones naturally have their place in the picturesque taffetas, and mix well with glass, silver, or gold. Poppy-red is used with white, and so is mignonette-green with grey. The striped designs in wide and narrow designs and quaint cinnamon and plucky-yellow shades recall the Josephine age.

LACE-MAKING REVIVAL

THE tide of fashion in handwork among the hostesses of Mayfair, and of the larger country houses is setting again towards lace-making.

Inspired by some of the exquisite lace that the Queen lends to exhibitions from her large collection and by the ultra-feminine trend of dress fashion, women are putting aside knitting needles and embroidery needles for lace bobbins and crochet hooks.

The Lenged Of The Agate

THE SAND OF THE DESERT

Gives Attractive Shade

THE sand of the desert is a good colour for early spring, especially in soft wool materials. A pretty, dead sort of pink is charming in Angora and wool lame, which are two fabrics that go well together.

A cape-coat of lame in this shade looked attractive over a soft angora smocked dress, finished with a wide belt of plaited brown patent. Dull browns of monkish hue are smart for hopsacks and coarse canvases. They mix well with white or grey, and are especially intriguing when made up after the "habit" of the monk, with an amusing belt of coloured glass, a gay posy, and fanciful gloves and shoes.

REVIVING THE COLOURS

A LITTLE poppy oil applied on a piece of old jap silk is excellent for cleaning and reviving the colours of oil paintings. Never, never on any account try to clean oil painting with cotton wool, as pieces will only come off and stick to the picture. Your local oil and colourman will supply you with poppy oil.

BLOUSE ROBE

MORE and more women are adopting the smart blouse and long flowing skirt fashion, both for day and evening wear. A "blouse robe" which comprises skirt of dark brown satin and blouse of mushroom colour satin is ideal for afternoon wear.

THIS is the special mascot of the farmer and gardener.

It was, however, believed to be powerful as a general mascot all over the world.

In ancient Rome it was considered the most fortunate of all stones if mounted in a ring, and another Roman belief was that it would cure afflictions of the eyes.

Eastern races, notably the Persians, considered that this stone conferred eloquence and brought to its owners good fortune by inheritance or through a document.

There was a superstition also that it made its wearers lovable and beloved.

It is much used for men's signet rings.

In one reference book it is stated that there are numerous kinds of agate—cornelian, amethyst, quartz, jasper and even the opal are classed in this section.

There are star agates, moss agates and clouded agates.

The milky white agates are often artificially stained—an art of ancient origin. In a brilliant green they are most saleable.

Some of the finest agates come from Ontario, Canada.

Others are found in Scotland and the shops in the Highlands they are tremendously sold as souvenirs to tourists to take back to their friends.

MILLINERS STUDY THE BRIMLINE

London. WHEN warmer days come it will be the turn of the brim to attract attention. The forward poke will still be seen, even in the sweeping lines of the large hats. Women are taking the greatest interest in the wide brims, but they will not be worn till March winds are over and the fur coat collars have diminished or given place to ties.

TWO LIPSTICKS

MOTHERS are booking make-up lessons for their daughters with a Mayfair specialist, who gives a whole hour's instruction for a reasonable fee. This includes a special "tip" in the art of applying eye mascara so that it does not run over in a heated ball-room; the correct make-up for presentation, and the use of two lipsticks of different shades, one for the upper and one for the lower lip, in order to get the fashionable natural beauty effect.

Eyelashes, an important feature on a young girl, are often scanty from exposure, study at school under indifferent lights, and lack of care. Massage with a new roller, consisting of tiny round sponges on an ivory roller that has been dipped in eyelash oil, will soon lengthen, thicken and curl the eyelashes.

DRAWER-POLISH

DRAWERS that do not run easily are most inconvenient and often cause damage both to the furniture that contains them and to the wall behind. If dampness is suspected the drawers should be lifted out and slowly but thoroughly dried in a warm room. If any rough places are to be found on their edges they should be rubbed down with fine sandpaper until perfectly smooth. All dust should then be carefully wiped off and the edges and sides of the drawers well rubbed with beeswax or with a good floor-polish. The slots in which the drawers run should also be examined and similarly treated if necessary.

A WELL-KEPT LINEN CUPBOARD

UNDOUBTEDLY a well-stocked, well-kept linen cupboard is a sheer delight to every thrifty housewife and its attainment is made possible to far more of us than would otherwise be the case, by the opportunities offered to the careful buyer during sale time.

HEALTHY BABIES

PROVIDED they are warmly wrapped up, children should not miss going out into the fresh air every day. Rain doesn't hurt if they are adequately protected. But in foggy weather infants and very young children should be kept at home. They older children, before going out in fog, and on returning, should gargle the throat with salt and water. This offers a barrier to infection.

THE MONOPOLY OF EXTREME YOUTH

THE charm of a soft, clear, un-wrinkled skin is not the monopoly of extreme youth. Beauty specialists are teaching the older woman how to preserve the fine skins that are an English heritage and which need not get lined and wrinkled prematurely if they are not allowed to become dry.

LINSEED OIL

THERE is nothing to better plain linseed oil for morocco leather. It will give it a beautiful polish, but do remember that it is most important to remove the dust first, and to use absolutely clean clothes.

TARNISH

FOR stubborn tarnish on a brass or copper gong, rub with a cloth dipped in knife powder. Then polish with a good metal-polish.

Gull Crosses Line First But Disqualified

THRILLING YACHTING IN BREEZY WEATHER

The sailing match arranged for yesterday afternoon between Messrs. and the United Services in "A" class boats was cancelled owing to the Members' team not being complete. Therefore an ordinary "A" class race was held instead.

All the boats started in a fine breeze well roofed. A3, A12, and A5 had a small lead over the other boats round the first mark (Quarry Bay). Those boats who shook out their reefs on the run down to Rumsey shoal mark scored an advantage, and all the 12 boats rounded Rumsey shoal mark very close together.

The boats became separated on the beat up to Kowloon Rocks, where A12 led, followed by A3 and A5, but the positions again changed on rounding the Quarry Bay mark, then being A5, A9, and A12.

A9 crossed the line first, but was disqualified for touching a mark. A5 dropped to fourth place, giving the victory to A12 after a fine race over 9.4 miles.

Detailed results were:

Rowing Regatta To Be Held Next Saturday

The incessant rain yesterday caused many sporting activities to be postponed.

The Rowing Regatta, in which the Yacht Club and the V. R. C. were to have competed, was postponed until next Saturday afternoon, while the Queen's College annual athletic meeting, which was to have been held at Causeway Bay, and all cricket matches were cancelled.

CLOSING DATE FOR K.C.C. TENNIS ENTRIES EXTENDED

Although the entries for the Kowloon Cricket Club's Lawn Tennis Tournament should have closed last night, the Committee have seen fit to extend the closing date until next Wednesday.

REST BEAT CHAMPION CAER CLARK CUP XI MISS BROWN GIVES FINE FAREWELL DISPLAY

ONE of the best hockey games of this season was seen on the Y.M.C.A. ground yesterday when the Rest beat the Hong Kong Ladies, champions of the Caer Clark Cup tournament, by 3 goals to 1 in an encounter featured by brilliant passing under the worst possible conditions.

One of the features of the game was the work of the wingers, particularly Miss O. Brown, the Rest's left-winger, who flashed across countless first-class centres and who scored the best goal of the match with a first-time effort. Miss Marsh, the champions' right-winger, was also very much in the limelight with some extraordinarily good work.

Miss J. Wong, the Rest pivot, and Miss McKenna, of the champions, gave their best displays to date in their respective pivot position.

"Y" LADIES TRIO FAREWELLED

Misses Brown, Wilson & Hickey Leaving For Home Shortly

The "Y" Ladies are losing three members of their hockey team next month when Miss O. Brown, who has captained the team for the past two seasons, leaves on Saturday next for England, while Miss J. Wilson and Miss L. Hickey will leave the Colony on April 30, also for home.

These three players were farewelled yesterday by the "Y" Ladies Hockey Club at a tea in the West Lounge, following the Champions versus the Rest game at King's Park.

Mrs. Ingram, President of the Ladies' section of the "Y," made a short speech wishing the three ladies bon voyage, to which they made suitable replies.

Among those present were Mrs. Ingram and Miss R. Ingram, Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Palmer, Mr. E. F. Selk, Miss A. Fowler, Mrs. Burke, Miss S. Dalziel, Miss P. McCaw, Miss M. Gardiner, Miss T. Dennis, and the Misses W. and M. George.

"Y" LADIES TO MEET HERMES TEAM

Game Next Thursday

On Thursday next the "Y" Ladies Hockey Club will meet a team from H. M. Aircraft Carrier Hermes at Happy Valley, commencing at 6.10 p.m.

The following is the ladies' team: —W. George, J. Wilson and Mrs. Burke; L. Hickey, E. Thomson and R. Ingram; T. Dennis, S. Dalziel, P. McCaw, A. Fowler and O. Brown.

INTERNATIONAL CRICKET

Portugal To Meet India To-day

The first International cricket match to be staged in the Colony will be played on the Club de Recreio ground to-day, weather permitting, commencing at 1 p.m., between teams representing Portugal and India.

India will be without the services of U. M. Omar, of the Craggengower Cricket Club, who is unfortunately unable to play.

India will be represented by F. D. Pereira (Capt.), A. R. Minu, A. H. Rumjahn, A. H. Madar, S. A. Ismail, A. S. Sufiad, M. P. Madar, A. R. Abbas, M. el Arculli, Y. el Arculli and A. M. Rumjahn. Reserve—A. R. Kitchell.

Portugal will be represented by A. M. Rodrigues (Capt.), E. L. Gosano, H. A. Alves, A. P. Pereira, A. P. Gutierrez, G. A. Gutierrez, L. J. Gutierrez, P. M. N. da Silva, E. M. L. Soares, F. J. Remedios and A. Prata. Reserve—H. L. Ozorio.

ALBERT HEDGES' NEW GOLF APPOINTMENT

Albert Hedges, who for 14 years was professional to the North Surrey Golf Club, Norbury, has been appointed professional to the Coudon Court Club, where he succeeds Leslie Cotton.

Conditions were far from ideal, and although a steady drizzle persisted for most of the morning and right through the afternoon, the players insisted that the match be played, and, surprisingly, there was a fair number of spectators.

One of the many outstanding features of the game was the manner in which the players kept their feet, and there being at the most only five tumbles during the whole game.

Mrs. Harrop Shines

Mrs. Harrop, who had displayed disappointing form throughout the season, played one of the best games of any of the Hong Kong Ladies' forwards this season, and, together with Mrs. Moutrie, was always prominent in the most dangerous raids.

The intermediate lines on both sides played well and consequently the game was fairly even.

Individually, Miss George did not have as much to do as Miss Hance, the champions' goalkeeper, but she made one excellent point blank save from Mrs. Moutrie.

A Fatal Error

Miss Osmund and Miss Fowler, the two Rest backs, were very good and let very little pass them; the former, however, made one bad mistake in the first half when she failed to cover her colleague and let Mrs. Moutrie through to open the scoring.

Miss Grey was easily the pick of the four backs, while Miss Helling played up to her usually good standard.

Miss J. Smalley played quite her best game of the season at left-half for the champions, and held Miss Gittins and Miss Dalziel fairly easily, although she tired slightly in the latter stages of the game when Miss Dalziel sent through some excellent passes.

Outstanding Pivot

Miss J. Wong was the pick of the six half-backs on display, with Miss McKenna a close second.

Contrary to expectations, Miss Bryson performed nobly throughout, and, although more of a spoiler, rendered invaluable aid at times with most scoop shots to her winger, Miss Brown.

Miss Woolley was right off her game and could do very little right. Miss Ferguson, the champions' right-half, was not her usual self and let through Miss Brown on innumerable occasions.

Poor Experiment

Miss Gittins was definitely not a success on the Rest's right-wing, and when she reverted to her inside position with Miss Dalziel out on the wing a great impetus was given the Rest attack.

DEUTSCHER KLUB BEAT RESOLUTE'S FOOTBALL TEAM

Keen Game Seen At Kowloon

LUEHRING AND SOLTAU SHINE IN LOCAL DEFENCE

The football team of the Hamburg-American liner ss. Resolute sustained their third defeat yesterday when they lost to the local Deutscher Klub (German Club), who won a very close game by the odd goal in three after being outplayed for the greater part of the game.

The encounter took place on the Kowloon Football Club ground, and, in spite of the slippery surface, both sides took the game very seriously—too seriously in fact—and as a result two penalties, one on either side, were thrown away.

Novices At Game

Both teams were very amusing at times and this can be readily understood when one considers the fact that before yesterday's encounter the local team had seldom played the game, whereas the ship's side had played together for the past five years.

The Resolute were easily the better team and why they failed to win is a complete mystery; they had the local Germans' goal at their mercy time and again, but ballooned the ball or shot wide.

Luehring's Good Keeping

Luehring, the local team's goalkeeper, played an outstanding game and for a debut appearance made a better job of things than some of our junior division League goalkeepers.

Pracht and Hesse were the outstanding forwards and between them were responsible for both the local goals, although Pracht actually scored them.

Local Wingers Poor

Mueller, on the right wing, was much too fast for himself and was content to wait for the ball instead of making an attempt to snatch up the passes for a return centre. H. Lange Jr., on the left wing, was a passenger throughout, and when he did kick the ball it was invariably in the wrong direction much to the disgust of his overworked half-back.

ENGINEERS BEAT RAILWAY CLUB

Jordan And Colman Net The Goals

The Engineers were decidedly the better of two fairly well balanced teams, when they defeated the Railway Club by two clear goals on the latter's ground yesterday.

Heavy going marred what might have been an interesting encounter, as both teams, played extremely fast football.

The weight and size of the soldiers, however, gradually proved too much for the diminutive Railway eleven, and after 20 minutes, following a series of attacks, Jordan, the Sappers' inside-left, placed them in the lead.

Within a few minutes their lead was increased, Colman succeeding in netting with a high drop shot from 25 yards out.

Although two goals in the lead, the Sappers failed to increase their score. Splendid defensive work by Wong Man-kwai and Yeung Lam frustrated all further efforts to score.

CLUB LEADER'S GREAT DISPLAY IN MUD

ARMY SCORE FROM KICK OFF BUT OUTPLAYED

ROWLANDS AGAIN BRILLIANT

BEFORE a meagre attendance on the Kowloon Football ground yesterday, the Civilians, the holders, experienced little difficulty in retaining the Lai Wah Cup, defeating the Army by 4 goals to 2.

The weather conditions rendered any attempt at good football negative, and the game from a spectator's point of view was slow and uninteresting.

Howe contrived to keep his feet well in the first half, and, with Morton giving him plenty of rope, sent three good goals past Rowlands before the interval. In the second period, however, Morton realised his previous error, and was always in close attendance on the Civilians' centre-forward.

Ward did a lot of effective work in a quiet way, and it was from his perfectly-judged passes between Swain and Steele that Howe secured two of his goals.

Bertie Gosano found it difficult to evade North, and the slippery state of the ground slowed his game up considerably, while Bickford, on the left-wing, was once again left severely alone during the first-half. In the second-half the Club left-winger might have been the only forward on the Civilians' side, so incessantly was he pitted with the ball, while it was Gosano's turn to be left out in the cold.

A. V. Gosano Unsettled

"A. V." did not have a good day; he never really settled down to the conditions, and his usual accurate passes were seldom seen.

The forwards, as a line, did not combine together as well as expected, and it was left to Ward and Howe to effect the damage, which they did mainly by waiting for Swain and Steele to make slips.

The halves worked well, both in support of the attack, and in defence, Beltrao proving a good pivot and distributing the ball in fine style. Parker and Brooks took a long time to settle down, and the former found English and Sandford far too fast and tricky for him in the opening exchanges.

It was in the defence, however, that the Civilians' excelled. Strange and Chris. Ellis showed fine understanding, and the stolid display of the former, coupled with the quickness and anticipation of the latter, put paid to practically all the bustle and williness of Higgins and Ridley.

Brilliant Rowlands

Rodger had a few good shots to deal with, and was rarely at fault, but his opposite number, Rowlands, again emerged from a trying game covered with glory. Time and again, he alone stood between Howe or Gosano and a goal, and the brilliant manner in which he stopped point-blank drives from all angles, evoked well-merited applause.

Swain and Steele played much more confidently than in last week's match, and the latter's effective safety tactics in first-time kicking

TWO PLAYERS GIVEN MARCHING ORDERS

Fusiliers Beat Chinese Police

The Fusiliers secured a fairly comfortable victory when they defeated the Chinese Police by two clear goals on the Railway Ground yesterday.

Play throughout was very poor, and neither side really impressed at any period.

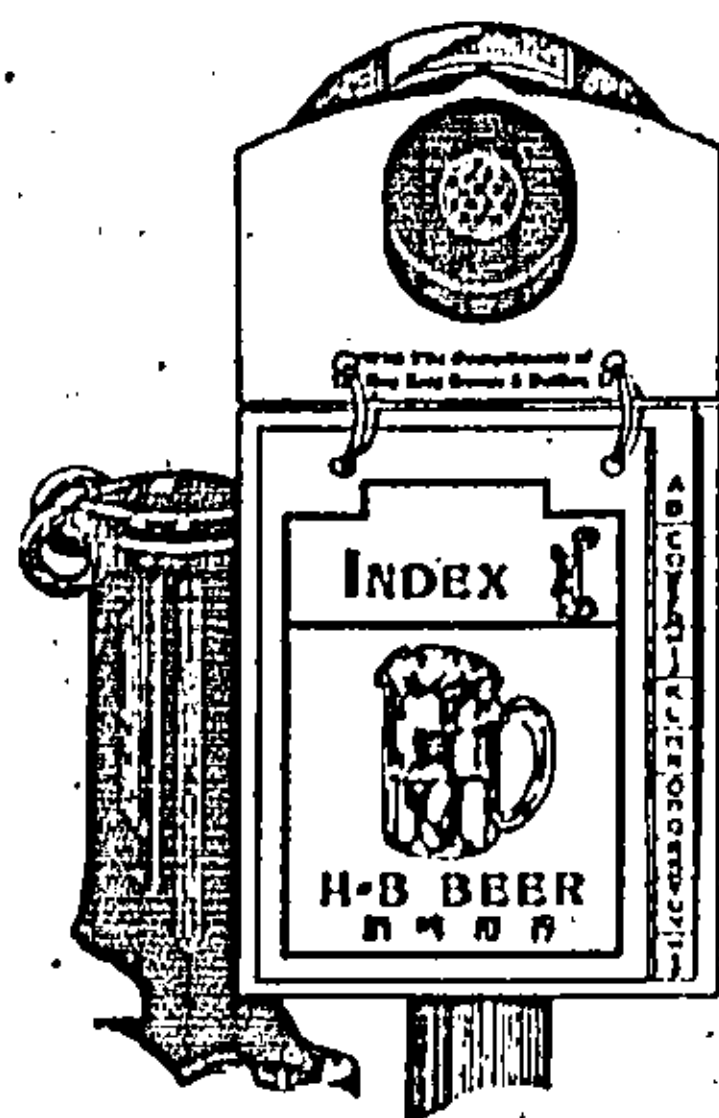

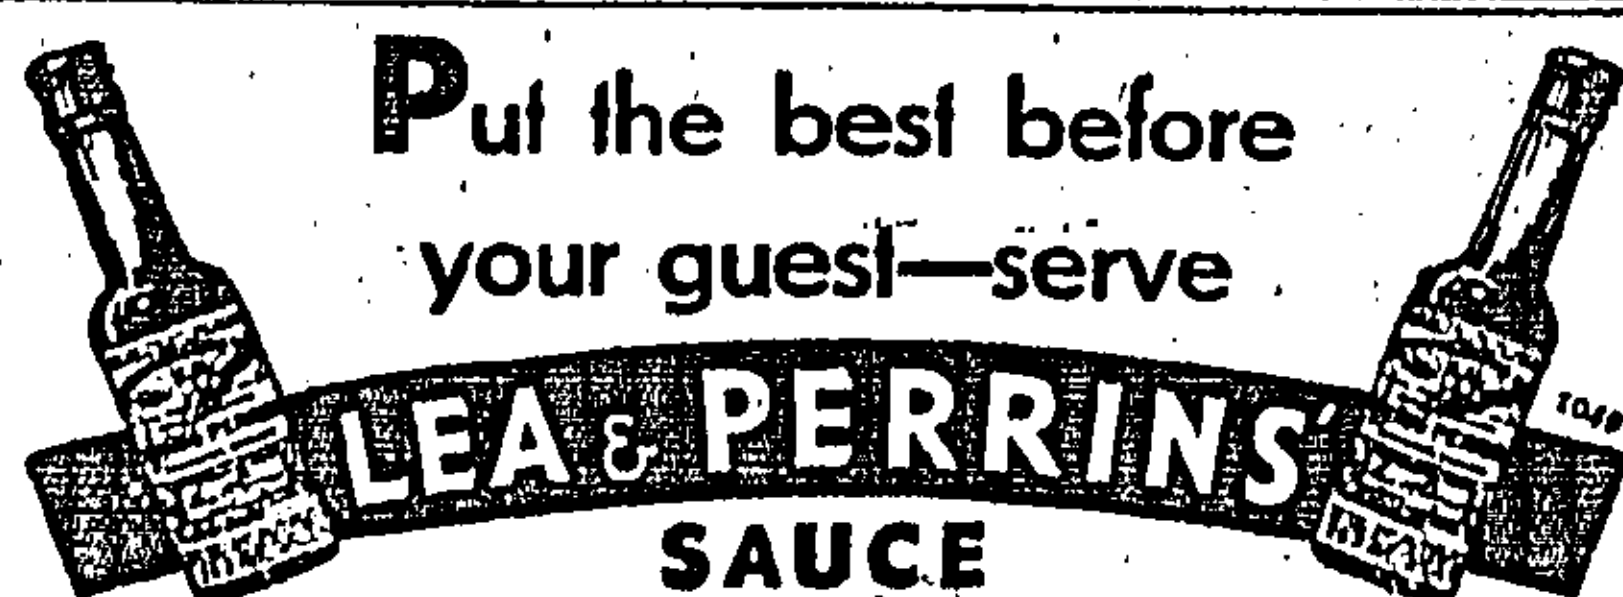

An ugly incident, in the second half resulted in Davies, of the Fusiliers, and Ip Lai-yee, of the Police, being ordered off for fighting.

Play during the opening stages of the game, was mostly in midfield, neither team appearing to be able to settle down, in fact, except for a good effort by Lawton late in the first half, when Chan cleared the Army's lines from several dangerous situations. Their tackling was none too sure, however, and in positioning, they were often caught at fault, but they were real 'stickers' from start to finish in what was a gruelling game for them.

LAI WAH CUP

Morton's Mistake

The Army weakness lay in the intermediate line, where lack of experience failed to stop the penetrating thrusts and speed of Howe, who was always the main danger to the Army goal. Morton gave him far too much scope in the first half, leaving him yards unmarked on occasions too numerous to recall, and it was in the first half that Howe was most dangerous. Although finding the heavy pitch difficult to negotiate, Morton otherwise gave a good display, and distributed some useful passes to his forwards, but when, in the second period, he managed to keep Howe more under control, it was too late.

Kenehan and North were two hard-working wing-halves, and though opposing two fast men, managed to hold their own very creditably. Kenehan had a fairly easy passage in the early part of the game, but found the combined efforts of Bickford and A. V. Gosano too much for him later on.

The forwards had much of the ball throughout, and had only themselves to blame for not finding the net more than twice. Hesitation to shoot on a day that was given to first-time shooting on each and every occasion frittered away all the hard work and running about that was done by Higgins and Sandford.

Higgins Dashing Leader

Higgins was a dashing leader, with good ball control, and he received splendid support from Sandford, but all the forwards broke down when they reached the goal area. English and Baldry, the two wingers, were speedy and clever, and sent over some good centres, but Ridley, though opening in brilliant form, faded away and was very subdued in the second half.

Syd Strange won the toss and the Army immediately launched a whirlwind attack which resulted in a goal in the very first minute. Ridley sent Baldry away on the left, and the winger's centre was secured by Higgins, who rounded Beltrao and sent the ball through to Sandford, who beat Rodger with a fast low drive.

After a spell of midfield play, in which the civilians gradually settled down to the heavy conditions, the equaliser came after a melee in the Army goalmouth. A shot from Howe hit the upright, and, although Rowlands managed to punch clear with a crowd of players in front of him, A. V. Gosano rushed in and netted before the 'keeper' could recover.

Higgins Spoils Good Effort

Play was now fairly even and Rodger was tested with good efforts by Baldry and Sandford. The players found it hard to accustom themselves to the behaviour of the greasy ball, which skidded off the surface of the pitch at a great pace and spoiled many well-meant passes.

Higgins then made a spectacular run-through from the half-way line, beating man after man, only to finish a great movement by shooting direct at Rodger. At the other end, Rowlands effected two brilliant saves at point-blank range from Howe and Ward, but was finally beaten by Howe after 20 minutes, following a clever move between "A. V." and Ward, the inside-right neatly pushing the ball through to Howe, who took it in his stride and easily beat Rowlands.

Three More Goals

In the next minute, Ward was allowed to send Howe through in exactly the same manner, and again the centre-forward found the net. A few minutes later the civilians burst through again. Ward sending out to Bertie Gosano, who coolly placed the ball at Howe's feet 15 yards out, and the latter beat Rowlands with a splendid left-foot drive, which curled high into the top corner of the net.

Just before the interval, the Army made a succession of attacks, during one of which Ridley wormed his way through, drawing the defence out of position before, parting with the ball to Baldry. The winger sent in low shot across the goalmouth for Higgins to meet it first-time and place it well out of Rodger's reach.

Game Second Half

The second-half was very tame, the ground by this time being a

SNOOKER LEAGUE RESULTS

Police Hold Premier Positions

BOWLERS SECURE RECORD BREAK OF 23

The Prison Officers' Mess and the Central Police Mess are leading in the Steel Coulson Snooker League as the result of last Tuesday's play when the former defeated the Dockyard Police by 3 games to 2 and the latter beat St. Patrick's Club by five clear games.

In the other two games the R.E., W.O.'s and Sgts. Mess beat the Catholic Union Club by 3 matches to 2 and the C. and P.O.'s Recreation Club beat the Garrison Sgts. Mess by 3 matches to 2.

Staff Sergeant Bowler of the Garrison Sergeants' Mess team compiled an excellent 23 break which is the highest break in the League to date. The previous highest break was made by Mr. Stafford of the R. N. Dockyard Police.

A very good game was witnessed between Funnell of St. Patrick's Club and Mr. C. Pile of the Central Police Mess, the latter taking the last three colours to win the game by only 2 points.

Two good games should result from next Tuesday's games when the leaders will meet with stiff opposition from the Chief and Petty Officer's Recreation Club and the Catholic Club.

The following are the results of matches played last Tuesday:

Club	R.E., W.O.'s & Sgts. Mess	Score
Prison Officers	59	32
Antenna	35	44
Santos	24	58

Cambridge, Mass., Yesterday.—Jack Medica of America, swam the 1,500 metres free style in 18 minutes, 59-3/10 seconds to establish a new world's record.—Reuter.

veritable quagmire. The players were floundering in the thick mud, and, with a steady rain to increase their troubles, football became an unenviable task. The game lived up on a few occasions; once when "A. V." broke through only to have his shot saved by Rowlands at a yard's range, and a little later when first English shot just outside, and then Ridley sent over from a favourable position.

The Cup was presented to S. Strange, captain of the winning side, by Mrs. Mitchell, wife of the Vice-President of the Hong Kong Football Association, after a brief introductory speech by Major C. M. Mannece, Chairman of the Hong Kong Football Association.

Civilians:—Rodger, C. Pile, S. Strange; Brooks, Beltrao and Parker; B. Gosano, Ward, Howe, A. V. Gosano and Bickford.

Army:—Rowlands; Swain, Steele; Kenehan, Morton, North, English, Sandford, Higgins, Ridley and Baldry.

HOCKEY

Mrs. White lived up to her reputation as a leader, and, although not very much in the limelight, shone with well directed passes to her wingers and inside colleagues.

Miss Smith's Good Goal

Miss M. Smith was very good at inside-left and scored a glorious first-time goal from a centre by Miss Dalziel.

Miss Brown, who made her farewell appearance in the Coer Clark Cup series, played a wonderful game carrying off the individual honours of the clash. She showed astounding speed under the poor conditions and her centres were never better. Miss Marsh, Mrs. Moutrie, and Mrs. Harrop were the pick of the champions' forwards and shone in excellent passing bouts. Miss J. Dalziel was off her game, while Miss Jacks lacked sting in her centring.

Champions Score First

The Hong Kong Ladies, much against the run of the play, opened the scoring when Mrs. Moutrie ran through from a melee to score off the upright.

A few minutes later the Host equalised when Mrs. White scored from close in, and just before the interval Miss Brown gave the Host the lead when she netted with a first-time effort on the run, the ball entering high between the posts (there being no nets).

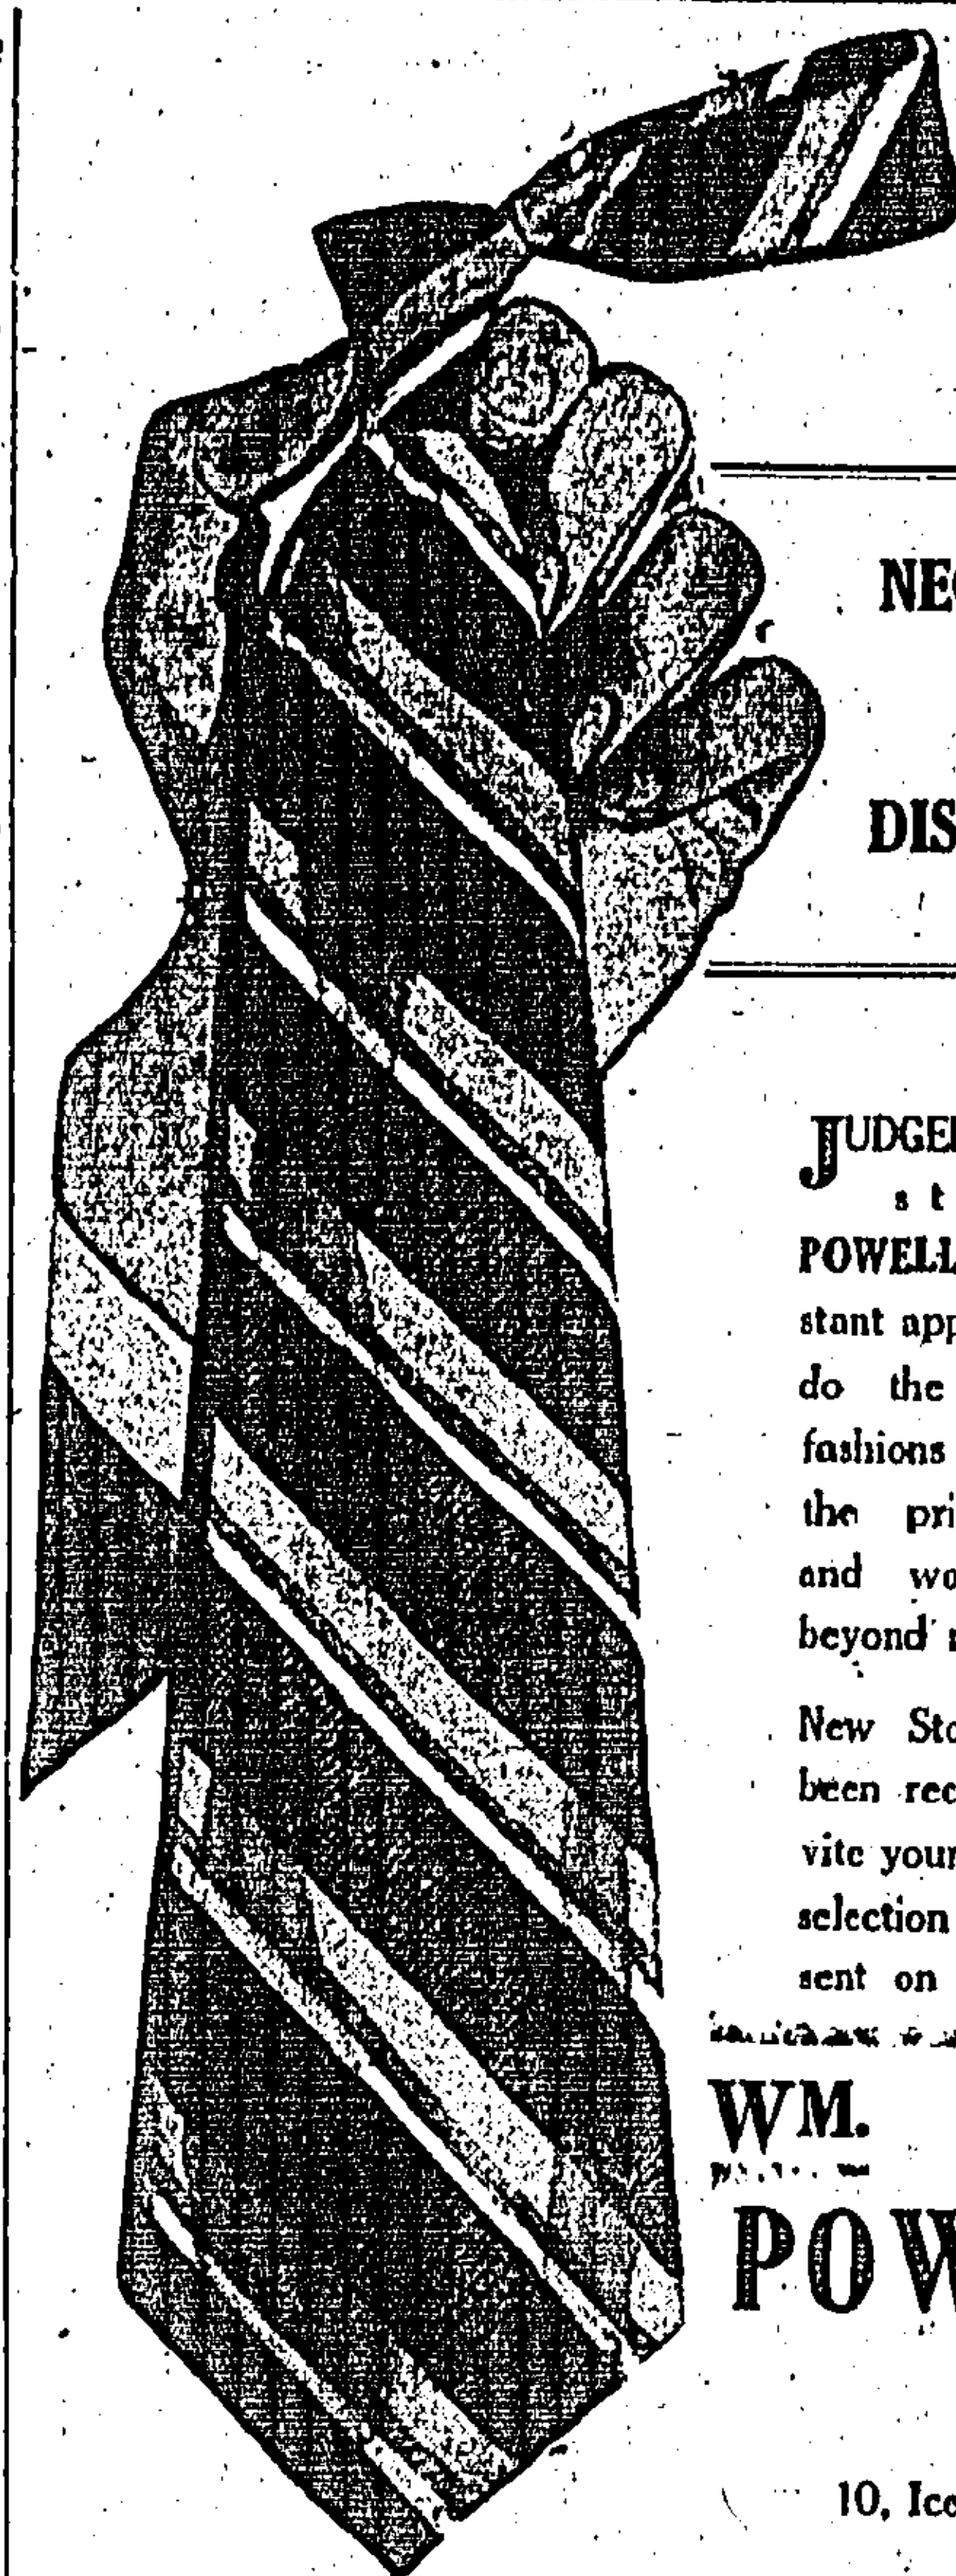

In the second half the Host enjoyed more of the play and their efforts were rewarded with a good first-time goal from the stick of Miss Smith, who converted Miss Dalziel's centre with a powerful shot.

Mr. G. T. Palmer and Mr. E. F. Salk refereed and the teams were:—
The Host:—W. George; C. Oamund and A. Fowler; I. Woolley, J. Wong, and M. Bryson; P. Gittins, S. Dalziel, Mrs. G. White, M. Smith and O. Brown.
H. K. Ladies:—B. Hance; E. M. Gray, B. Helbling; C. Ferguson, N. McKenna, J. T. C. Smalley; W. Marsh, P. M. Harrop, J. Dalziel, J. Moutrie and A. Jacks.

Cups Presented

Following the game, the Coer Clark Cup and the Lady Southern runners-up Cup were presented by Mrs. T. E. Penrice, Chairman of the Hong Kong Ladies' Hockey Association, to Mrs. Moutrie, and Mrs. White, captains of the Hong Kong Ladies and the St. Andrew's Ladies, respectively.

Mrs. Pearce, who is shortly leaving the Colony for Europe, was the recipient of a bouquet from Mrs. Moutrie, on behalf of the Association.

THE GOLD CLAUSE MYSTERY

Simple Explanation

Depreciated Dollar And 100 Per Cent. Money

(By ARTHUR WADE)

CONSIDER the remarkable gold clause contract by repaying the potency of Mr. John Perry's $1000 Liberty Bond. All I know about Mr. Perry personally is that he lives in New York and that he was one of the plaintiffs in the great Gold Clause case.

There were several other plaintiffs, but Mr. Perry's $1,000 investment is far and away the handiest key for unlocking the mystery of this high-powered trial which has occupied nine leading judges in the Supreme Court of the United States of America for a long time.

Put quite simply, Mr. Perry thought that when the U. S. Treasury wished to repay his Liberty Bond with $1000, the sum stated on its face as being due to him, it should have paid him $1090.

If he had been actuated merely by cussedness no more would have been heard of him and his bond. But he had reasoned the whole thing out and, with others, was able to erect on it a great legal case that has created world excitement.

100 Per Cent Money

When we pierce through the figures we know just how it was Mr. Perry could prosecute his claim. The $1000 with which he brought his bond years ago were 100 per cent. money. They were equal to approximately 48 ounces of gold. Those with which he was repaid were only 60 per cent. dollars, having been devaluated by Roosevelt, and would buy only 28 4-7th ounces of gold.

Now the famous Gold Clause which appeared in Mr. Perry's and thousands of other bonds said that the debt would be repayable in gold coin of the standard and fineness which was in use when the bond was issued.

In other words, the clause was a contract that holders of all the bonds in which it appeared would receive interest in, and be repaid with, money having a value in gold equal to the old 100 per cent. dollar.

The Devaluated Dollar
When Mr. Roosevelt and Congress put America off the gold standard they took steps which finally made the dollar worth only three-fifths of its old weight in gold. Knowing all about the gold clause, they abrogated it when their currency measures were legislated in 1933.

Mr. Perry and the other plaintiffs claim that this action was unconstitutional—the essence of the big case is this plea of unconstitutionality. The bond-holders say Congress had no power to impair the gold clause contract by repaying them in other money than that stipulated in the bond.

If this claim could succeed ever, bond in the United States containing a gold clause ($100,000,000,000 worth of them) has a value far in excess of the present price. A sudden elevation to this new value would sacrifice every other security in favour of gold-clause bonds.

Convulsive markets would be inevitable. Commodities and ordinary shares would slump and bonds would soar, involving debtors in greatly increased liabilities for interest and repayment.

The country which gives us Hollywood and has a most marvellous faculty for dramatising itself to the whole world could not miss the glorious opportunity of these gold clause cases.

Plaintiffs Overshadowed
Mr. Perry and Mr. F. Eugene Noritz and others who brought about the legal actions slipped into the background. An orgy of statistics based on their claims began and figures were built up into a series of sky-scraping totals.

Thus it was gaily conjectured that if the gold clause won and the judgment could be enforced, the Federal Debt of the United States would be increased by $17,000,000,000 any $2,400,000,000.

That was but a beginning. The total public and private debt of the nation which is subject to the rigours of the gold clause would increase, it was calculated, by $60,000,000,000, or, in our equivalent, $14,000,000,000. Those are not irresponsible calculations. They are part of the solid contentions

MILITARY PARADE ON MAY 7

Volunteers Likely To Take Part

It is notified for general information that a parade of the Garrison will be held at Happy Valley from 9.45 to 11 a.m. on May 7, 1935, in connection with the celebration of His Majesty's Silver Jubilee in which it is hoped the Hong Kong Volunteer Defence Corps will take part.

His Excellency the Governor has expressed the hope that all individuals or firms having in their employment members of the Corps, will wherever possible grant them facilities to attend the parade.

which were put forward during the case.

Nor was this all. These figures concern only the principal of the debts.

What of effects on the annual interest payments, the amount the debtors (consisting of the Federal Government, the States, municipalities, railways and companies) must shell out year by year?

Once more the mathematicians answer the question. These would be increased by a trifle of $2,600,000,000 dollars, or roughly $500,000,000 yearly.

One is too dizzy to continue. It is like looking down the skyscraper from the top—and in a nightmare.

The Other Side.

Now let us notice a very serious matter, part of the tragedy-comedy of human affairs, which this case brings to the forefront. In claiming their pound of flesh from the Law the Gold Clause plaintiffs have been asking for abundant measure, full and running over.

Most of the gold obligations were floated at a time when money would buy fewer units of almost any marketed article than now. In other words, their dollars would very conceivably have brought them less wheat, copper, rubber, cotton when they were 100-cent dollars than would the dollars of 60 cents each with which the Government desired to repay their bonds.

Turn these statements round a little, and we see that enforcement of the gold clause would mean that all debtors would have to give gold-clause bond-holders a greater amount of purchasing power than they obtained when they borrowed the money.

And the same truth would apply to all the annual interest payments. Each would represent a giving away by the debtor of additional purchasing power.

The words "additional purchasing power" have an attractive sound; but it must be remembered that in this case the bondholders would gain at the expense of President Roosevelt's Recovery programme—that is to say, at the expense of the rest of the community.

Chaining Gold

We can rejoice that the gold clause case has been dramatised so effectively by our American kin, who probably have never taken it very seriously, knowing that its effects, in any event, would be neutralised by Mr. Roosevelt and Congress. Its value lies in showing the world that the mastery of gold in currency affairs must be ended.

A good servant gold may be in the future, but, as this case shows, it can never again be taken as a true measure of debts, prices and services unless its value is put in chains.

WISE & OTHERWISE

WE SAY IT FIRST

- (1) "It's just what I wanted."
- (2) "What a lovely present."
- (3) "You shouldn't have bothered."

- (4) "How marvellous."
- (5) "Heavens! she doesn't expect me to wear this, does she?"

MADAME MASSON
BRILLIANT PIANIST
VISITS COLONY

Madame M. Masson To Give Recital

MUSICIAN OF WORLD-WIDE
REPUTATION

AN interesting visitor to Hong Kong is Madame Madalah Masson, a pianist of world-wide reputation. Her visit is purely one of pleasure, but she has been persuaded to give one or two recitals during her stay, the first of these being arranged to take place at the
Helena May Institute on April 11.

Madame Masson, who comes of Scotch-English stock (with a dash of Irish and French, she says), was born in Melbourne, Australia, but educated abroad. She studied music in Berlin under Kwast and in Munich under Edward Scharff. She has given recitals in London, Paris,
New York, Berlin, Vienna—in fact in most of the chief cities of the world.

A Terrible Accident

Some three years ago Madame Masson started out from New York on a professional world-tour, which was cut short by a terrible accident which occurred to her in Tokyo, where she narrowly escaped being burnt to death. One arm was so badly injured that it was thought she would never be able to play again; but the Japanese doctors, by a miracle of surgery, succeeded in completely restoring its use, and Madame Masson is now fulfilling the tour contract interrupted by her accident.

She has just come from Tokyo, where she played Saint-Saens' G minor concertos with the Tokyo New Symphony Orchestra. This orchestra is unique in being the only all-Japanese orchestra playing Western music under a Japanese conductor.

Australia's Invitation

After leaving the hospital in Japan Madame Masson returned to New York, where she received a cable from the Australian Government inviting her to broadcast a series of first-class programmes to the music-loving people of Australia. In response to this invitation she gave a series of 80 concerts all over the Commonwealth.

Madame Masson is now on her way back to America to fulfil some of the engagements of her originally-planned tour. From Hong Kong she will return to Tokyo, where she is under contract to take part in two further concerts in May before sailing for San Francisco.

Supple Hands

Madame Masson is often asked how, on her many voyages, when regular practice is difficult, if not impossible, she manages to retain the all-important suppleness of her fingers. Yesterday she revealed the secret. Not only does she carry with her a "dumb keyboard," but she possesses, and constantly uses, a pair of ancient Chinese carved walnuts from Peking, which were presented to her in Japan by an admirer of her playing. Those, it is said, were used by high Court officials who were proud of their hands, to keep them supple and beautiful; and Madame Masson declares that they are unsurpassable for this purpose.

A Feast Of Music

At the Helena May recital fixed for April 11 Madame Masson promises items from Beethoven,
Debussy and Smettona, with excerpts from the Etudes of Chopin (including the F minor Ballade) and two Intermezzi of Brahms.
She is also featuring a group of old English works by Purcell and
Dr. Arne—a programme that lovers of good music should on no account miss.

my patients to try 'ASPRO' Tablets for complaints too numerous to mention, and all have been loud in their praise for the wonders which 'ASPRO' has done for them.

You may use this testimony in any

Nerves were in a Terrible Way —
'ASPRO's Surprise

1 Garden Street,
Middle Brighton, S.S.

15/12/32

Dear Sirs,
Last week I had 18 teeth out, and not being well my nerves were in a terrible way; in fact,
I had to be taken home from the dentist. I went on for a couple of days in terrible pain with my head and eyes, due to my nerves, so I had to go to a doctor. On my way home I bought a packet of 'ASPRO'. I took three and laid down, and to my surprise I woke up feeling lovely. Now, if I feel a slight headache at all I fly to my 'ASPRO'. I think 'ASPRO' should be in every home. I could mention a few more facts where 'ASPRO' has done good in my home. Once tried, always used.

Yours faithfully,
(Sgd.) Mrs. H. VIVIAN

Good Press Day
CelebrationsHighly Successful Play
At Club de Recreio

REV. FR. RYAN'S LECTURE

An entertaining evening was held at the Club de Recreio last night when a three act comedy, entitled "Dearies," was excellently presented by nine young amateurs, in celebration of Good Press Day.

The cast comprised Deborah Main (Jeannette Marr), Barbara (Lucy Jorge), Kate (Bella Marr), Lena (Ruby Moy), Mrs. Langthorne (Elizabeth Wong), Sylvia (Marie Albers), Mrs. Chase (Katherine Marr), Mammy (Olive Lee) and Miss Ada Armitage (Julia Matheson), and all are to be congratulated on their exceptionally good display. Musical items were arranged by the Troubadours Jazz Band.

Among those present were: His Excellency H. Valtorta, Vicar Apostolic of Hong Kong, Dr. B. Basto, President of the Catholic Truth Society, the Rev. Father Gallagher S.J., Principal of the Wah Yan College, Chev. J. M. Alves, Dr. Bernardo da Souza, Mr. L. A. Barton, Robert Chou, President of the Chinese Catholic Young Men's Society, and Mr. J. E. Lau, vice-President of the St. Teresa's Chinese Young Men's Society.

During the course of the evening the Rev. Father T. F. Ryan S.J., M.A., gave the following lecture on the Catholic Press:

"It is a consoling thing for those who have at heart the progress of the Good Press movement to find so many here to-night ready to give it support. I know that support of the movement has not been the sole cause of your coming, for the name of the brilliant players who have within the last few months added so notably to their previous laurels is enough to draw many out of their homes on an unpleasant evening, yet I know that it was the thought of supporting the Good Press that drew most of you here. You have shown your support of it by coming, and the thought of the excellent performance that you would witness was just the reward that you felt you had a right to expect for doing such a good act.

"Now that you are here I want to say something to you about the Good Press. I want you to understand the importance of it, so that you will become not merely supporters of it, but active workers for the spreading of it. I know that you already appreciate the value of good reading—whether of books, pamphlets or periodicals—but I want you not merely to appreciate it in theory but in practice too, so that you will each one of you before Good Press Sunday comes to an end take a definite decision to become regular readers of good literature in the coming year and to do your part to induce others also to do likewise.

Well-Informed On Truth

"Why, you might ask, is it necessary to insist in this way on good reading? Is there some special need of it now that did not exist before? There is a very special need, but I am selecting only two of the many reasons that exist. You should read what is good, firstly, in order to counteract in yourselves the effect of so many harmful influences that are working upon you, and, secondly, to be well-informed on the side of Truth. But, first of all, let me say what I mean by good reading. I do not mean what is merely negatively good, that is, what is not definitely bad. I mean what is positively good, books and papers that are expressly written to help you to lead better lives and to be active in the cause of good.

"Reading of this kind is necessary, as I said, to counteract in yourselves the influences for evil that are actively affecting you. There is no need for me to tell you that such influences are at work round about you; influences active against the very name of God; influences subversive of the moral order; influences directed against everything that stands for justice and lawful authority. And what are we to oppose to these influences. I know that I am speaking to many of different faiths, to many in whose lives religion holds a varying place, to some in whose lives it holds perhaps no place, but as you come here to a function held under Catholic auspices I know that you are prepared for what I am going to say when I tell you that it is my faith, and the faith of those with whom I stand, that the Truth of Christ is the only thing that can stand against the forces of evil working in the world to-day, that to-day it is more than ever 'Christ or Chaos', and that the eternal Truth of Christ can only be steadfastly defended when it rests in the ago-old, unchanging fortress of the Catholic Church.

Bad Influences

"The issue is knit to-day. It is between Christ or Chaos in the home, Christ or Chaos in the state. Is the home being attacked? Can you read a paper, can you open a magazine, can you take up a novel, can you visit a cinema without having thrust before you blatantly shamelessly, the claim that God does not matter, that sin does not matter, that all that matters is money and pleasure, and that only cranks and puritans think the contrary. And what is our answer to that? While others temporise and compromise, we oppose to it fearlessly the Catholic doctrine of the sanctity of marriage, the life-long endurance of the marriage bond, the sacred obligations of parentage, the eternal truth that pleasure is not the one object of existence, and that suffering and hardship must sometimes be endured if eternal life is to be won.

"How can you impress upon yourselves sufficiently strongly these principles, so that they will stand firm against all the callousness and cynicism and evil example that you see around you; how, if not by letting your mind open to good impressions through good reading? Read regularly books or papers that are as insistent on the truth as other books and papers are insidiously hostile to it, and the evil that they do will be combated. Remember, I am not speaking against all non-Catholic publications as if they all were harmful. Least of all am I making any accusation on our local press. We are fortunate in Hong Kong in having a clean press that maintains a high sense of the dignity and honour of journalism; but it has to bear witness to the events in the world around us, and the things it has to tell are only too often the deeds of those who regard not either God or His law.

Truth Needs Champions

"Secondly, I said that you have to be well-informed on Truth. There have been different times and different places in which Truth needed special champions. At one time it needed valiant pioneers who would cut new paths across the world; at another time it needed brave champions who would defend it courageously against all attack; now, perhaps more than anything else, it needs well-informed adherents who can give reason for the Faith that they hold and defend it by sound argument against sneers and indifference as well as against direct attack.

"How can you become well-informed if not by reading? You need not spend days over ponderous volumes. If you make a practice of reading regularly some of the periodicals or small booklets that are issued now to meet the needs of the day, you will be prepared to withstand attack and to help others to withstand it.

Catholic Periodicals

"Hence my recommendation to you on this Good Press Day is to register a determination to become regular readers of good literature. What kind of literature? I have two suggestions. Either become regular readers of some Catholic periodical or become a regular purchaser of Catholic pamphlets. What periodical? Any Catholic periodical. You see them on sale outside the door of your churches on Sunday morning. There are monthly and weekly periodicals available. Choose any one you please.

"As I happen to be Editor of a Catholic monthly periodical, The Rock, I naturally feel interested in that one. It is designed to meet your needs and your interests. For instance, in the new number that is now on sale you find an account of the experiences of a heroic Missionary in the hands of the Communists, Fr. Bravo, the Dominican, who was more than a year's imprisonment; a released only a few weeks ago after

OLD, GOTHIC CASTLE
UNEARTHEDHidden From Turks 900
Years AgoIMPORTANT DISCOVERY IN HUNGARY

Budapest.

Excavation work near Gran, the historic seat of the Hungarian Prince Archbishops, has resulted in the discovery of the castle of King Stephen, called the Saint, who ruled here over 900 years ago.

The find was made by a worker whose axe dropped and vanished below the ground. When he squeezed through the hole to get it, he found the buried courtyard of a castle, parts of which were subsequently unearthed.

The castle was of Gothic style and was filled with many interesting remnants, dating from various periods, such as friezes, mouldings, capitals, pieces of columns and weapons.

Covered With Earth

A suite of subterranean apartments with additions constructed later was unearthed, as well as an underground passage and two rooms connecting the palace with St. Stephen's Chapel. The reason why nothing has been known heretofore about the existence of the underground rooms is that they were covered with earth to hide them from the Turks who invaded Hungary in the sixteenth century. Other parts of the castle were later adapted to serve as a fortress.

According to the opinion of archaeological experts, there is no doubt that the underground rooms unearthed now, formed the main part of the palace of King Stephen the Saint, who inhabited it for about 20 years, from 1005 to 1025, when he took up residence in Stuhlweissenburg, while the bishops made Gran their residence, building annexes to the palace.

Three Periods Of Style

Three different periods of architectural style can be distinguished: the Roman period from the eleventh to twelfth centuries, evidenced particularly by remainders of the Roman fresco paintings and by the castle wall. The second period, late Gothic style, is featured by fine pieces of capitals, vaults and turrets, from the fourteenth century. The third period, dating back to the golden days of King Matthias Corvinus, shows Renaissance style, with Italian traits visible particularly in the beautiful moldings.

Other objects found there include old Hungarian arms, missiles, armors, coins and antique household utensils.

The most remarkable discovery, however, is another subterranean corridor which leads down to the bank of the Danube River, and, it is expected, passes underneath the river bed to the opposite shore. More interesting discoveries are expected to be made, especially in the area situated between the courtyard and the old fortress wall, because this is the oldest part of the palace.

description of the present state of things in Mexico; an explanation of what really happens when a person is declared a Saint, as Blessed John Fisher and Thomas More will be in a few months; a statement of the Catholic position with regard to evolution; a few pages devoted to answers to questions proposed by people in Hong Kong just like yourselves, and so on. But this is only one of the many Catholic periodicals. Read regularly and, almost without realising it, you will steadily receive the information and instruction that you require.

"Another form of simple and useful reading that I recommend is that of the small pamphlets that are on sale near the doors of the churches. Do not think that they are of slight importance because they are small or because they cost only ten cents. They are a splendid battery against falsehood and error, and I strongly recommend you to look over the titles now and then as you pass, and to take one home with you to read.

Twofold Resolution

"Now so far I have only spoken of your own part as a reader of good literature. I want you to think of others too. Do not be content with giving the benefits of good reading only to yourselves. Share it with others. If each of you could become a centre for the diffusion of good literature, what untold good could you not do! See if you cannot do something. Here is, therefore, a twofold resolution that I propose to you: First, that you determine to buy and read at least once a month a Catholic periodical or pamphlet; secondly, that each month you put some good publication into the hands of someone who would otherwise not have seen it.

"But perhaps you could help those even not within your own circle of acquaintances. You can do it by taking part in the work of the newly-formed Association under the auspices of which this Good Press Day has been organised this year: the Hong Kong Catholic Truth Society. It has been formed for the purpose of spreading good literature both in Chinese and in English, and the extent of its work depends on the amount of support which it receives from the Catholic laity of the Colony. The annual subscription is $5. Members who pay this receive every month a carefully selected pamphlet and they assist in spreading far and wide Catholic Truth through the written word.

"I hope for great things from this young Society, and I think myself fortunate in being able to invite you to be among the first members. (Give in your name as soon as you can; you will find particulars of it in the notices at your church doors, and in years to come you will be able to look back with satisfaction on being among the first to lead a new forward movement for the advancement of Truth in days that were dark with error."

To-day's Special Sermons

To-day has been set aside as "Good Press Day" by the Roman Catholic community of the Colony. The object is to draw the attention of all Catholics to the necessity of reading and spreading good books and literature.

Special sermons will be preached in all the Catholic churches, and Solemn High Mass will be held in the Cathedral at 10.30 a.m. At 4 p.m. a sermon will be delivered by the Reverend Father Gallagher.

THE ONLY TRUCK AT ANY PRICE THAT GIVES YOU ALL THESE

NEW QUICK-STOPPING RIB-COOLED BRAKES

Cast alloy iron drums with integral cooling ribs dissipate heat faster. Drums will not "bell-mouth." No "fading," even when making a series of quick stops in rapid succession. Newly designed brake mechanism makes stopping quicker and smoother with heavy loads. Longer life between brake adjustments.

NEW TRUCK-TYPE HEAVY-DUTY CLUTCH

New design assures much longer clutch life, minimizes engagement. Lower pedal pressure at idling speed. Weights on outer ends of clutch release levers increase plate pressure by centrifugal force as the speed of the engine increases. Improved ventilation makes clutch run cooler. Diameter increased to 11 inches. Larger frictional area. Vibration dampener eliminates synchronized engine and axle noises.

NEW HIGH-EFFICIENCY COOLING SYSTEM

Larger water-pump impellers circulate more water per minute. Six-blade 15-inch fan draws more air through radiator. Radiator 2 1/4 inches wider, 15% more radiating area. Water jackets extend full length of cylinder walls and along upper part of crankcase, keeping both engine and oil at efficient operating temperatures.

NEW CRANKCASE VENTILATION SYSTEM

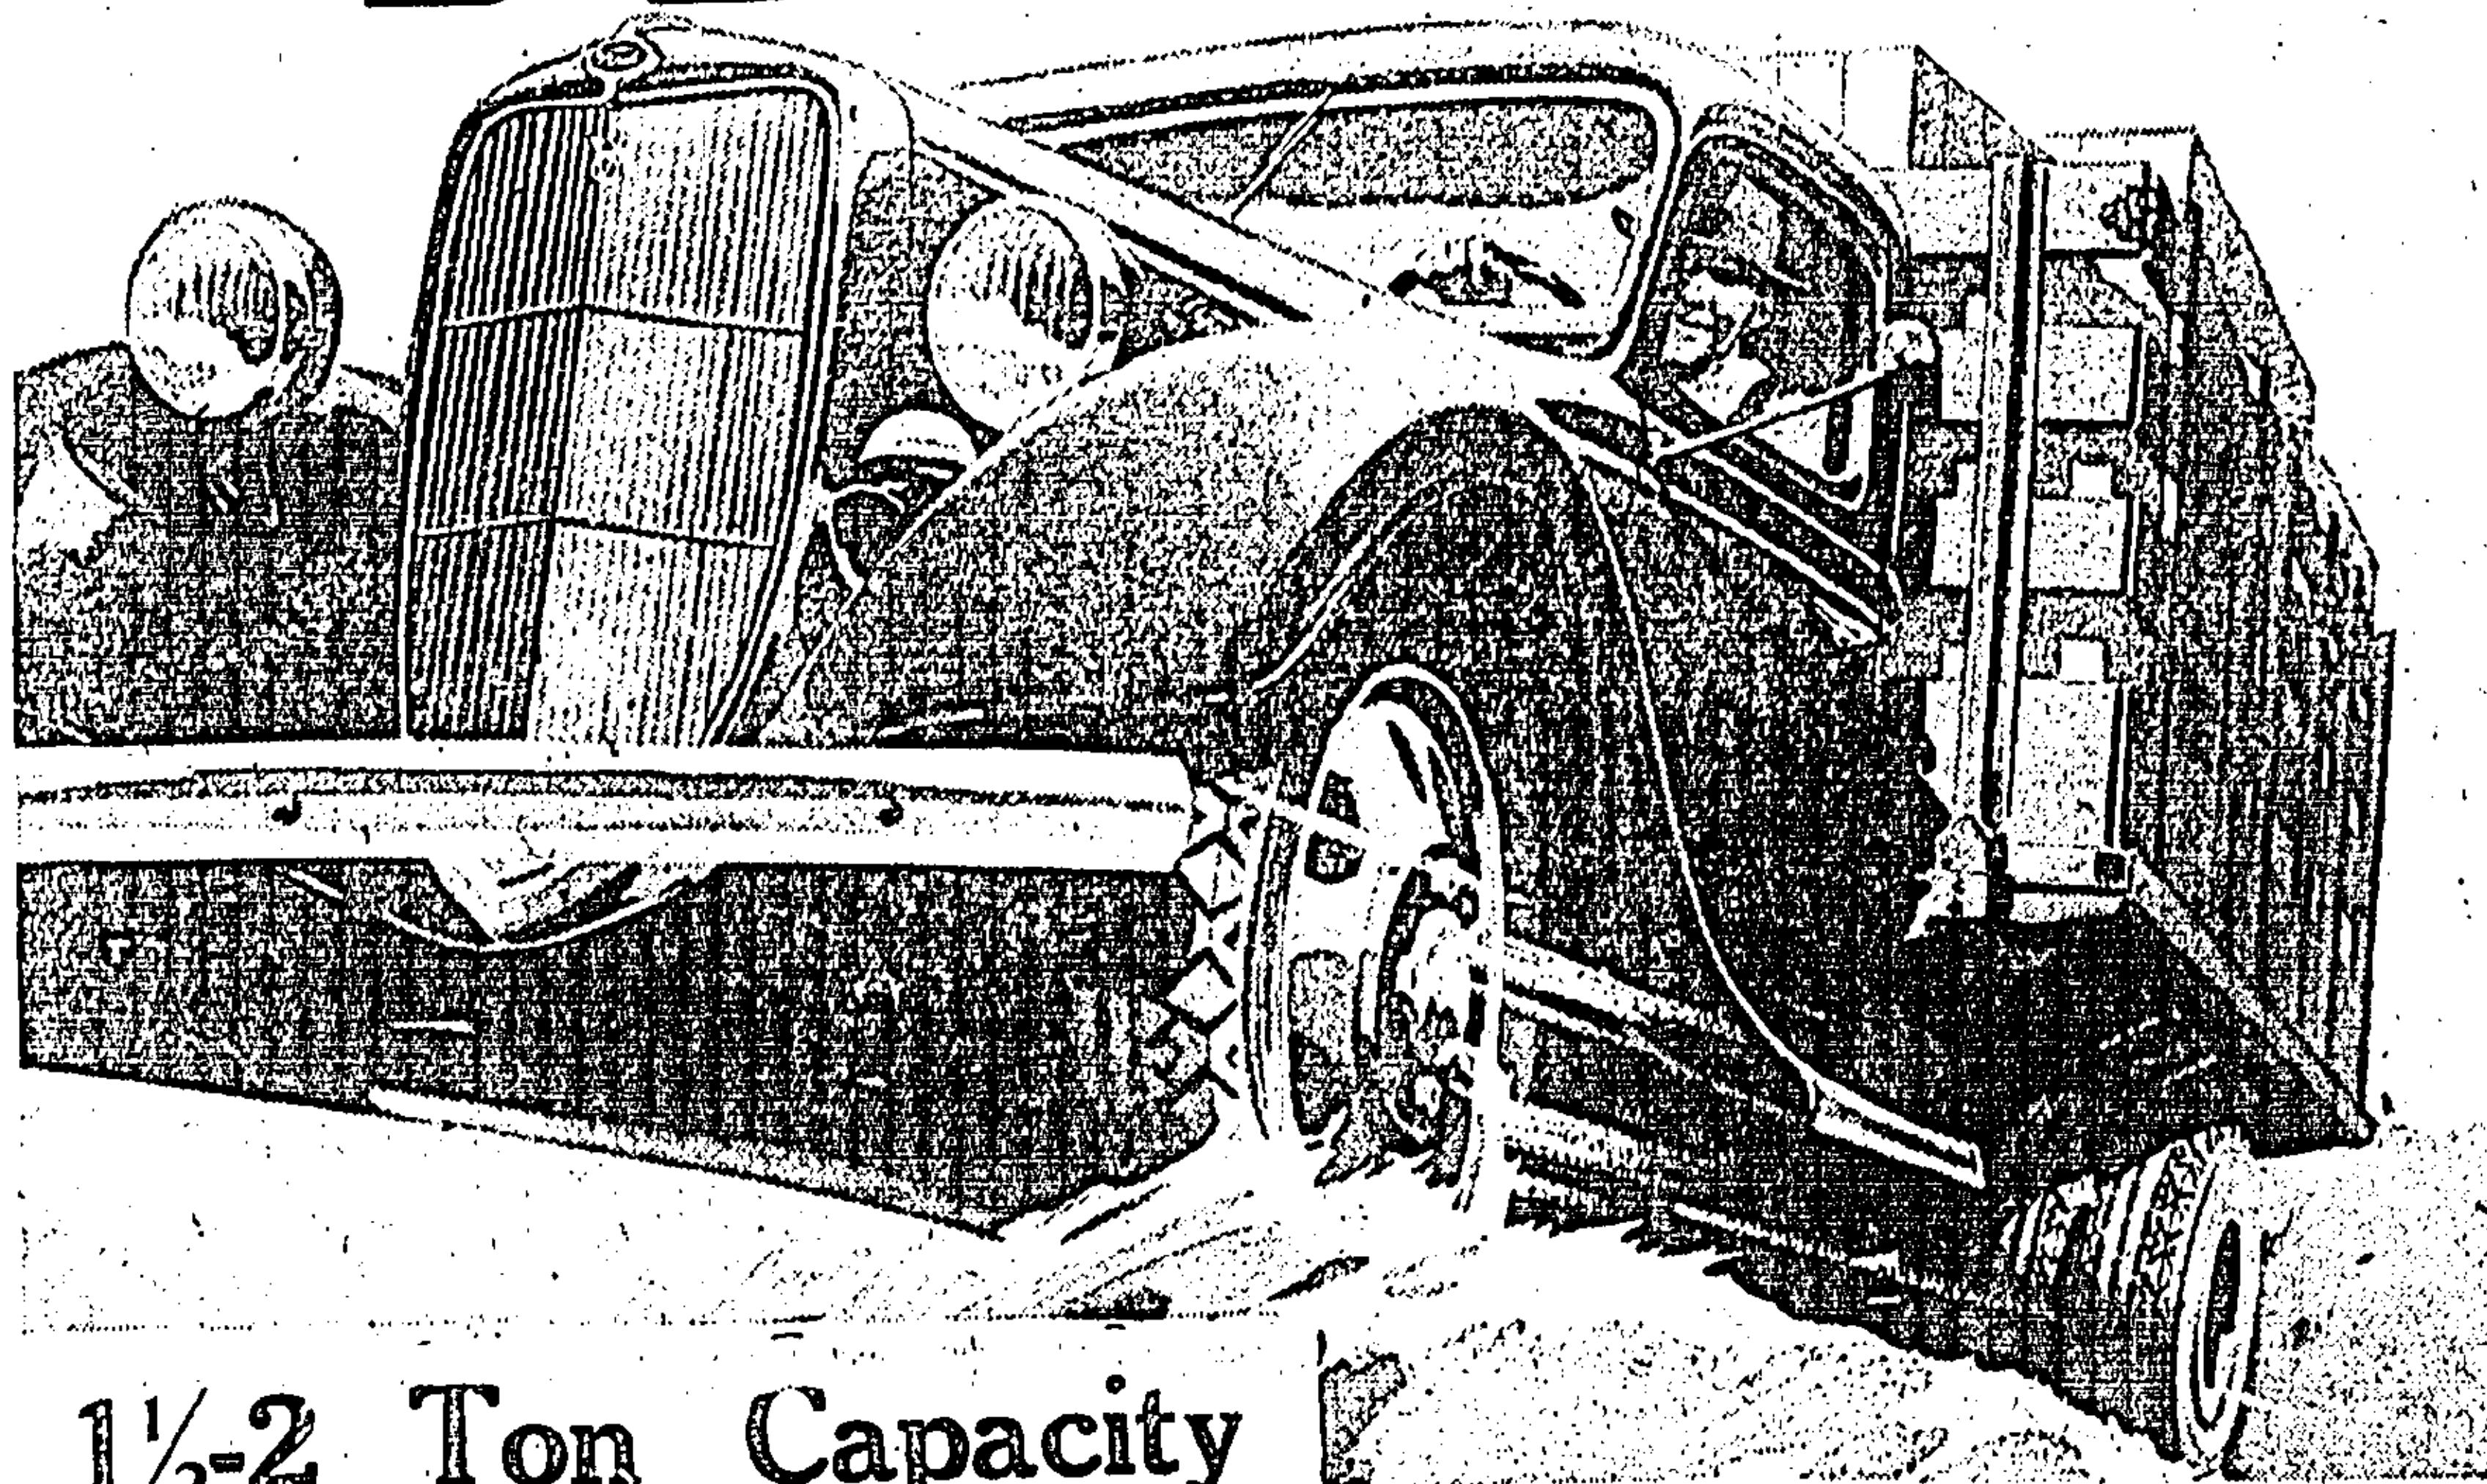

Directed-flow crankcase ventilation reduces corrosion and oil dilution by removing acid fumes, water vapor, unburned gasoline and other impurities.

V-8 PERFORMANCE WITH 4-CYLINDER ECONOMY

The Ford V-8 truck engine develops more than 80 horsepower. Uses no more fuel than a "four." Dual carburetor and dual intake manifold. Lightweight, cast alloy pistons. Exhaust valve seat inserts. Heavy-duty copper-lead connecting-rod bearings. Special truck-type cylinder heads.

Full-floating Rear Axle with Straddle-mounted Driving Pinion. Full Torque-tube Drive Permits Free-shackling of semi-elliptic Rear Springs. Deep, Rugged Frame with no "Kick-up." Oilless Front Spring Shackles. Baked Enamel Finish. Deepskirted Fenders.

THE NEW 1935 FORD V-8 TRUCK

1 1/2-2 Ton Capacity

ONE hundred and twenty-five thousand Ford V-8 Trucks in use throughout the world have proved their right to the claim "America's great truck value." Because of this wide-spread acceptance, the entire production of Ford Truck engines is of the V-8 type.

To the proved design of the Ford V-8 Truck have been added the advantages of NEW load distribution which improves braking efficiency and results in more uniform tyre and brake wear. NEW brakes that make stopping quicker and smoother with heavy loads. . . a NEW, larger clutch which operates on an entirely new principle. . . NEW Clear-Vision Ventilation, adjustable seat, wider cab and many other features that improve driver comfort. . . NEW cooling efficiency results from larger radiator and water pump impellers. . . NEW crank-case ventilation reduces corrosion and oil dilution. . . NEW skirted fenders and NEW cab design materially improve appearance.

But from your point of view, the most important question is: "What will this new truck do for me?" Your Ford dealer is ready to answer that question right NOW. He is so proud of this new truck . . . he is so confident of V-8 performance and V-8 economy that he will gladly arrange an "on-the-job" test for you if you are in the market for a new truck. Ask your Ford dealer to let you try a 1935

Ford V-8 Truck with your own loads . . . over your own routes . . . with your own driver at the wheel.

Then ask the price! Such performance and economy at a price so low will convince you once and for all that this 1935 Ford V-8 Truck is now more than ever AMERICA'S GREAT TRUCK VALUE!

The front spring and engine have been moved forward on the chassis, thus making it possible to move the body further forward. This arrangement reduces the amount of body overhang, permits more room in the cab, and moves the load-centre forward. The distance from back of cab to centre of rear axle is increased 6 1/2 inches. This new load distribution results in more efficient braking and more uniform tyre and brake wear.

Dr. Sven Hedin's party used only Ford units on their historical trip across the Gobi and Sinkiang. They gave wonderful service and a member of the party said he believed only Fords could stand up under such conditions!

THE WHISKY OF DISTINCTION

The Hong Kong Sunday Herald

HONG KONG, SUNDAY MARCH 31, 1935.

Berlin And Moscow.

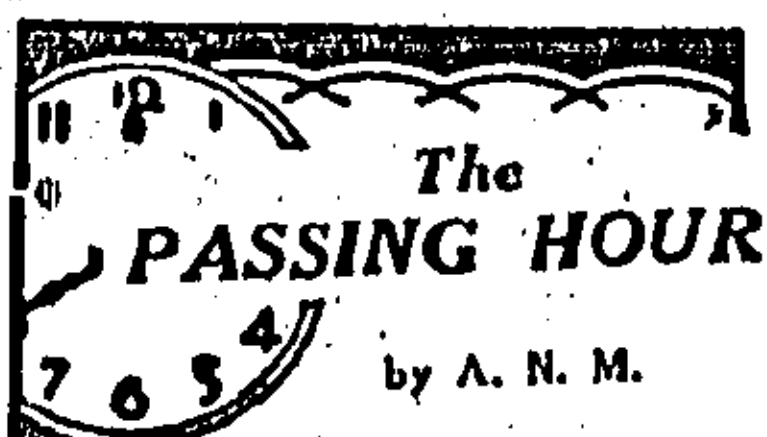

IT was Napoleon who said that it was his principle not to employ any General who had been "unlucky." An atrociously inequitable system, no doubt; but rather akin to that of the genius of the modern British Navy, Admiral "Jacky" Fisher, whose maxim was that "neptunism is the soul of efficiency." The idea is that of the racing men who hold the doctrine of "horses for courses," which means simply that some horses that have a quite capable of winning will only win at certain places, and will have some bad luck; such as getting "shut in" elsewhere. However inequitable and deplorable these freaks of fortune may be there is, no doubt, that they have their effect on history.

These reflections are suggested by the "exploratory" tour of Sir John Simon in Europe. With every wish for his success, it is very difficult to forget that never has he been favoured with a glint of sunshine from the sun of Good Luck. "Born of Quaker ancestry, with one of the keenest analytical brains of our time, it is not likely that those who seek the peace of the world will ever have a more sincere advocate as their representative, and yet we find that after several years of endeavour with very loyal backing he is faced with a keener suspicion and a higher temperature of war fever in Europe than there has been since 1914. Forty years ago, when he was still an undergraduate and President of the Oxford Union Debating Society, he was a popular speaker known on many platforms in the North of England. Lord Rosebery gave a dinner in his honour in the National Liberal Club, before he took his degree, to introduce him to the older generation of public men; and Mr. Asquith made him his Solicitor-General. It was he who drafted for Mr. Lloyd George the enormously intricate scheme of self-supporting National Insurance, only to see his handiwork destroyed later by the "generosity" of men who preferred popularity to solvency in the matter of "transitional benefit." A little later, as Attorney General, he drafted "Dora"—the Defence of the Realm Act, which only became so unpopular because it was so effective for war purposes. Then, with the Lord Chancellorship offered to him, he sacrificed his whole career rather than agree to conscription, against which his early training had given him a conscientious objection. Some years of wandering in a political wilderness followed, during which he was unable to persuade any constituency to send him once more to Parliament. But his views on conscription did not prevent his going to the front voluntarily and giving much useful help as a legal adviser on the Staff in France and there were appearances in famous cases known to every lawyer, including even an appearance at the Old Bailey in a murder case in which he delivered what the best of all critics, Marshall Hall, who had expected to be briefed himself, said was the greatest speech ever made in that famous Court.

Then came re-election to Parliament, and the National Government gave an opportunity of ignoring old party ties and differences of war policy. The appointment to the Secretaryship of Foreign Affairs was the fulfilment of a lifelong ambition, and the task was shouldered of making the League of Nations the alternative to war. It would be tedious to enumerate the disappointments of the last few years, of which it may be said in general that successive positions have been won always a year too late for the victory to be of any use.

This conference with Der Fuehrer in Berlin is not the first encounter of the two men. There was a very interesting correspondence when Germany resigned from the League, in which the case against resignation was so forcefully stated that there was practically nothing left to be said. Herr Hitler's reply was that the question at issue could not be decided by the British Minister's "juridical arguments." As the whole purpose of the League was to substitute "juridical" discussion for menaces and force, there was then nothing left to be said in reply by Sir John.

We live in days when there are regular posts; there are also telegraph and telephones, not to mention Ambassadors and newspapers; never was there so elaborate a mechanism for conveying news and opinions. When the aeroplane has to be dragged in to enable a Government to find out what another Government means the diplomatic machine has broken down completely. And it is a final stroke of bad luck that just at this moment the sore point of Meneh has to be aggravated by the capital sentence passed on four German citizens for murder of an accomplice in espionage. It seems time for a bit of good luck to come along.

A SOUTH AFRICAN FIREBRAND

THE passing of Tielman de Villiers Roos after a long illness removes one of vivid personalities from Empire politics. It is amazing how few people follow with intelligent interest the politics of any part of the Empire that does not happen to be their own residence; although they are often amazed themselves when it occurs that a long neglected subject breaks out into a disturbance that affects us all. Tielman Roos was educated on English lines in South Africa, and at the time of the South African War passed peaceful and studious years in the security of Capetown. Yet a few years later he was the recognised leader of the Transvaal Afrikaners Republican party, and had ousted General Botha and Smuts from their influence. Where he differed from Mr. De Valera and Mahatma Gandhi, who have been in the somewhat similar position of having it in their power to break up the Empire, was that he understood the working of Constitutional Government. Had the controversies of those years in South Africa, and the experience gathered in the course of their solution, briefly, the conception of Dominion Status, been studied and applied elsewhere, a vast amount of friction in Ireland would have been avoided; and it must be remembered that it was in South Africa that the Mahatma learned his politics.

"Tielman," as he was always called, was a genial soul in private life, and even the Native leaders, whose claim to a vote he vehemently opposed, bore him no illwill. As one of them remarked when upbraided for not being fierce enough, "we all know our Tielman." He liked a man to carry his money loose in his pocket, and never trusted anyone who used a purse, which he took to indicate a close-fisted disposition. After retiring from politics to the Bench, he resigned in order to force the Government, by a tearing rag-in campaign of propaganda, to abandon the gold standard, which was ruining the farmer by putting his prices above the market. The present prosperity has abundantly justified him. He had a violent dislike to Dr. Malan, now the leader of the Nationalist Rump, partly because he was a "predikant,"—or parson,—and partly because he was stout and bald, quite apart from his political views. Altogether he was very much a live wire, who could be relied on to make politics exciting.

ELIJAH

WHAT a rare treat the "Hong Kong Singers" gave us on Thursday night at the Cathedral. The up to date affectation of despising Oratorio because the music is familiar and has no fireworks, and because phrases are repeated, is merely a passing whim. For one thing the Oratorio will always be popular with singers who make no pretence of a professional standard, and for another a good performance makes a popular festival which is not at all likely to be supplanted by Grand Opera or any other recognised form. The delicacy of Mendelssohn makes a fine contrast with Handel's majestic power; but it would not be easy

THRILL OF TRAVEL BY IMPERIAL AIRWAYS

IMPRESSIONS OF JOURNEY BY GREAT LINER

(By E. N. Parker)

MR. J. B. Priestley remarks in his book "English Journey" that our great ocean liners mean something of what the cathedrals meant in the Middle Ages. After the launching of the Queen Mary it is easy to agree with him, and to understand that the same kind of pride and devotion which could work miracles in stone must have been present to inspire the creation of such marvels as these modern ships.

But the liners of the air are not less wonderful. If in a great Cunarder you almost forget that you are at sea, so in a big air-liner you find it hard to realise that you are in an aeroplane. The long saloons that look like railway Pullmans, the meals laid before you, the reading lamp at your elbow, and the bell that summons the steward—this is not flying, it is travelling de luxe. And de luxe is the right expression, since nothing but travel through the air can give such speed and smoothness of motion.

Few Air Wobblers

Clearly a weight of 14 tons, moving steadily at 100 miles an hour, is not likely to be deflected much by chance blows or breezes. A bicycle may bump and wobble on an uneven road whose inequalities are absolutely imperceptible to the occupants of a motor-coach. Very similar is the difference between an air-liner of the Hercules type and an ordinary non-commercial aeroplane.

It is not surprising that the passenger air traffic between London and Paris grows greater every month. By air the journey between the two capitals becomes an affair of unimaginable simplicity. Gone are all the old fatigues of transferring oneself and one's luggage from train to boat, and then again from boat to train. Instead, there is this: a private motor-coach from the Airway Terminals in central London to the Air Port of Croydon, a flight of about two hours to the French Air Port of Le Bourget, and then another brief motor-run to the heart of Paris. Passing through the Customs is matter of five minutes or less, for instead of hundreds of people

FIVE YEARS AGO

(Extracts from the Sunday Herald of March 30, 1930.)

With the object of effecting an early liquidation of the Kwangsi rebellion, General Chan Chal-tong, together with ranking commanders of the 8th Route Army, has despatched a frank and friendly-worded letter, characteristic of the C.I.C., to General Chang Kai-shek, of the Ironsides, strongly advising him to ponder carefully over his present precarious position and to surrender without further delay to the National Army by severing all his relations with the Kwangsi insurgents.

Mr. W. J. Currie, M.A., B.Sc. (Edin.), accompanied by his wife and children, left for home by the S.S. Rawalpindi.

Major Christopher Willson, O.B.E., who has been in the service of the Government since 1920, proceeded home on leave, on the expiration of which he will proceed to Shamen as Captain Superintendent of Police.

The Norwegian steamer Stoviken (Capt. G. B. Onarbjorn), which arrived here from Calcutta, was forced to make use of the local Flotilla Brigade, under Superintendent H. T. Brooks. Damage was confined to the coal bunkers.

Hong Kong Personalities

MR. WAI SHUI-PAK

This is the thirty-fifth of the exclusive series of sketches of leading Colony residents by Mr. A. S. Kung, the talented Hungarian artist.

OUR personality this week is Mr. Wai Shui-pak, alias Vi-Khai, who, though he has been a resident of Hong Kong for only five years, has, during that time, quietly and unobtrusively, conferred many benefits upon the Colony.

Mr. Wai Shui-pak, who is 43 years of age and a native of the Sam Shui district of Kwangtung, has spent the greater part of his life in French Indo-China, where he was educated at the French Commercial College of Saigon. He is naturally a fluent speaker of French. His acts of benevolence in Indo-China were many and of great extent, he having donated large sums of money for the building of the Kwong Siu Hospital, the Kwong Siu Association and the Chinese Chamber of Commerce in Saigon. For his many philanthropic activities he received the thanks of the French Government and was awarded the Dragon Medal in 1932. In addition he was awarded gold medals by the Kings of Annam and Cambodia. He was elected to represent the Chinese community in Saigon and as such was approved by the French Government. He is a director of the Kwong Siu Hospital, the Kwong Siu Association and the Chinese Chamber of Commerce in Saigon.

THE delicious flavour of 'Ovaltine' makes it a great favourite with children. And that is fortunate — for 'Ovaltine' supplies, in abundant measure, the additional nourishment which children need to make good the energy they spend so prodigally all day long.

'Ovaltine' is prepared from the highest qualities of malt extract, creamy milk and new-laid eggs.

But remember, it must be 'Ovaltine.' Unlike imitations, 'Ovaltine' does not contain household sugar to give it bulk and to cheapen the cost, nor does it contain a large percentage of cocoa. —Reject substitutes.

The Advent of Spring

In spite of the extremely windy and changeable weather we have been experiencing these last few weeks, all of us must have noticed a number of changes which have taken place in the countryside. Many trees have put on new garments of bright green, olive or pink tinted foliage. Some have shed their old leaves to expose their denuded branches to the wind and rain; but for a few days only, so quickly do the new leaves unfold and clothe their naked limbs as if they were ashamed to remain nudist for long. The fig trees, the large leaved banyans, are noteworthy in this respect; clothed in faded leaves a tree has braved the winter months without the loss of a single leaf, the rising sap reaches the topmost twigs and within a week every leaf is exfoliated and flutters to the ground; another week, the swelling buds split their caps and the leaves unfurl like a myriad little flags to welcome the arrival of Spring.

The Swallows have set about the task of building their clay nests beneath the eaves. The White-breasted Kingfisher sings his pathetic love song from the highest twig of a denuded. Flame-of-the-Forest whilst a pair of Chinese Magpies regard him scornfully. They have built their nest and hatched their eggs and he is still looking for a mate.

The common Paddy frog, Rana limnocarica, has spawned and wriggling black tadpoles swarm in the shallow warm water of the flooded rice fields to provide food for Egrets, hungry and exhausted after their long migration across the South China Seas from the Philippines and Borneo. Soon we shall see Paddy-birds and Orioles, Drongos and Cuckoos. The Rain-bird will tell us that rain is coming soon, a song to gladden the heart of the Water authorities. And all too soon our winter visitors will leave us for the cool of the northern climes—pipits and wagtails, stonechats and redstarts, thrushes and hawks.

The valleys are changing colour before our eyes, muddy brown gives places to paddy-green the fairest, purest green on earth. The water-buffalo returns to its labour of churning the flooded fields into cream-like mud and patient women stoop all day to plant out, row after row of clumps of paddy seedlings. Frogs croak, water-snakes hear the call and wake furnished from their long winter fast. Fewer frogs croak and fat and sleek reptiles swim along the stream or warm their glistening bodies whilst basking in the sun on a paddy bund.

Shrubs and climbers open wide their blossoms, the pure white of the wild rose and the yellow of the Cascapinia catch our eye from afar. Near at hand the sinister looking flowers of the poisonous Strophanthus, with their five narrow pendulous and twisted petals of yellow streaked with red, are noticed and on a sunny bank nearby is seen a patch of brilliant blue of the local Gentian, G. laurieri.

JUMBLE SALE AT ST. ANDREW'S

Smartness By Local Police Catches Out Money-Changer

Clever detective work on the part of the Hong Kong Police resulted in the arrest of Chau Ming, a money changer, who was charged before Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen at the Central Magistracy yesterday morning for uttering 40 counterfeit coins, and for being in possession of 141 counterfeit Chinese 20 cent pieces at No. 143 Connaught Road Central.

On being informed of accused's activity, Inspector K. W. Andrew, disguised a Chinese detective as an overseas Chinese from Singapore, who went to the shop in question to change some money. Counterfeit coins were handed out.

A search conducted by Inspector Andrew, who followed the Chinese detective into the shop, revealed that on a wooden tray, which had 10 compartments, four rows con-

DEATH PRESUMED

Herbert Larard Declared Lost On Yue Ying-wah

SEQUEL TO 1925 TYPHOON

Before His Honour the Chief Justice, Mr. A. D. A. MacGregor, Mr. Leo D'Almada Jr., instructed by Mr. F. G. Nigel of Messrs. Johnson, Stokes and Masters, this morning made an application for leave to presume the death of Herbert Larard, Marine Engineer, for the purposes of administration.

Counsel said that deceased's nearest relatives, Charles Edward Larard and Amelia Larard, of London, had instructed their solicitors that they had corresponded with the deceased since September, 1923 till the time of disappearance in August, 1925.

They further stated that they were aware that the deceased had left Hoihow for Hong Kong on the s.s. Yue Ying-wah, on which he was then serving as Chief Engineer, but following that they had had no news of him.

Counsel produced an affidavit of Mr. G. G. N. Tinson, which states that the deceased died a bachelor on or about August 8, 1925, while a certified copy of the ship's articles proved that Herbert Larard signed on as Chief Engineer.

Counsel also produced a third affidavit containing the Marine Court of Inquiry about the loss of the s.s. Yue Ying-wah.

The finding of the Marine Court of Inquiry was that the s.s. Yue Ying-wah had left Hoihow for Hong Kong on August 8, but had foundered with all hands in a typhoon between the two ports.

His Lordship said the evidence was very conclusive and granted leave to presume the death of Herbert Larard on or about August 8, 1925.

GESTETNER'S NEW PREMISES

Moving To Gloucester Building To-morrow

Due to the increase of their trade in Hong Kong, D. Gestetner (Eastern) Ltd., the manufacturers of the Gestetner Duplinox, are to-morrow opening new showrooms at No. 10, The Arcade, Gloucester Building.

The object is to give business executives an opportunity to see their Machines working. The latest electrical model is most interesting; here you see the mechanics of engineering mechanism, which, by delicate synchronisation of cogs and levers, push unprinted paper beneath a stencil and deliver into a collecting tray 3,000 or more perfect copies an hour, all ready for such purpose as they may be designed to fit, and so simple that a coolie can work the machine.

David Gestetner first invented the Duplinox in 1881, and now after 53 years the Company has over 200 Branches throughout the World, including three Branches in China.

The Company is also extending their Copying and Typewriting Department, and hope that more people will avail themselves of this service.

ST. JOHN BRIGADE BALL NEXT SATURDAY

Under the distinguished patronage of His Excellency The Governor, Sir William Peel, K.C.M.G., K.B.E., and Lady Peel, M.B.E., the St. John Ambulance Association and Brigade Annual Ball will be held at the Hong Kong Hotel next Saturday.

For assembling To Chiu, a fellow worker, Ho Shui-ling, a 30-year-old woodyard coolie, was fined $10, in default two weeks' imprisonment, by Mr. E. I. Wynne Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday.

INDIAN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Resolution Passed And Committee Formed

A General Public Meeting of the Indian merchants of Hong Kong, Canton, Macao and South China, was held in the hall of the Sind-Hindu Merchants' Club, China Building, yesterday afternoon.

Mr. K. B. Vaidya of Messrs. K. B. Vaidya and Sons, presided at the meeting.

The resolution to form the Indian Chamber of Commerce, which was proposed by Mr. Vaidya, and seconded by Mr. N. Nalkram, was passed, and, to proceed with the inauguration of the Chamber, a provisional organising committee of seven members was formed.

Those present at the meeting were: Messrs. K. B. Vaidya (K. B. Vaidya and Sons), S. N. Isack (Isack and Company), A. Tariwalla (Tariwalla and Company), W. S. Rathor (Rathor and Company), A. The Seven Words On The Cross

The Most Mysterious Saying Of All

"My God, Why Hast Thou Forsaken Me?"

(By the Rev. J. N. Lewis Bryan)

BETWEEN the third and fourth sayings upon the Cross, three hours had elapsed; three hours in which the sun itself had hidden its face,—hours of agony unspoken, the horror of which we can only dimly surmise,—broken at last by the loud cry "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?"

It is the only one recorded in the language in which it was spoken, but we have not been given the best translation. A better rendering would be "Why didst Thou forsake Me?"—which makes it a little less difficult to understand; for it is one of the most mysterious passages in the Scriptures.

On one occasion Martin Luther sat motionless for many hours pondering these words, and at last exclaimed "God forsaken of God! Who can understand it?" Some have read it as a confession that His great ideals had hopelessly failed, that He was perhaps repenting His sufferings for a race so little worthy of them.

Christ Truly Man

But in the light of the calmness which He maintained throughout His protracted suffering, and in view of His other sayings, these are inferences we must hesitate to draw. Besides which, it is a quotation from the twenty-second Psalm, which is one of triumphant faith and trust, and the suggestion that anyone who felt his ideals wrecked and his life-work shattered, would have allowed his mind to dwell upon this Psalm, seems unlikely in the highest degree.

To understand this fourth saying we must remember that Christ was truly man. He was not God walking the earth like man; He was God become man, sharing in our limitations, being in all points tempted as we are, tasting every fear and pain known to man, so that He could become our deliverer. So, in order that He might be our Brother and Helper in the last experience of all, He had to go through it alone and in human weakness. There was no divine wrath. God withheld His companionship, and the mortal anguish was permitted to take its course.

Loneliness

Yet many have maintained that, on the Cross, Christ endured the sharp strokes of the wrath of God, so making the Father a kind of Shylock, demanding His pound of flesh. Even Cowper spoke of God as "sheathing His sting in the heart of Christ." Such a view of the meaning of Calvary is unthinkable. God affirmed once "This is My beloved Son, in Whom I am well pleased," and God cannot deny Himself. He could not have been angry with Christ, either on His own account, or because of us. Did not Christ Himself say "Therefore doth my Father love Me, because I lay down My life?"

Deprived of the Father's companionship, which to Him had always been such a tremendous reality, on which He had always drawn fresh supplies of strength, He felt all the more keenly the desolation of death. The awful isolation chilled His heart. It is always the part of kindness to spare the sensitive a needless shock, and with His tender thoughtfulness He had bidden His disciple to take His mother away, so that she might not see the end.

But this deprived Him of any human companionship too. Now He was absolutely alone. So in prolonged and awful silence the three hours went by—the darkest hours in human history. To the desolation voiced in the tragic cry that broke the gloom, must be added His physical sufferings, though they were not as great as the sufferings of His soul.

Capacity For Suffering

It is pathetically true that the higher one rises in the scale of being, the greater becomes one's capacity for pleasure and for pain. A parent and his child, though constantly together, may really live in different worlds; the child will know nothing of his father's fears and hopes and anxieties; he will play with his toy in a house of mourning, because his joys and sorrows are comparatively small. But the cup that is deepest can be filled the fullest, and the tree that grows highest feels most the fury of the storm. So every step towards a richer life carries with it a keener sensitiveness of pain and grief.

When we apply that principle to the One Who was Altogether Love, it must be obvious that He suffered as no other being has ever suffered, when His soul in all its utter purity came into touch with the accumulated evil and sin of the world. Can we wonder that He cried out "My God, My God, why didst Thou forsake Me?" He did not endure God's wrath Himself, yet so closely was He joined with man, that He felt it as though it had fallen upon His own shoulders.

Father And Son

A youth was once being tried for some misdemeanour. "Have you," said the Judge "anything to say?" An old man rose, came forward, "We have nothing to say," he murmured. "We only ask for mercy." He was the father. He was guilty of no wrong, but he felt its shame, and it identified him with the prisoner. So Christ, through His love for man, shared the bitterness of their sins.

The fourth saying on the Cross was one of desolation; but there lurked within it a profound note of hope. He could still say "My" for the divine fellowship was unbroken. Even the darkness of His agony had not been able to take that away from Him. Behind the cloud was the bright light of the abiding Presence. The night was but the pledge of the morning, for the soul that can say "My God" as He said it, can never be forsaken, and that is why His fourth cry upon the Cross can ever be our cry, even in the darkest hour.

Fre't not, poor soul, while doubt and fear

Disturb thy breast; The pitying angels, who can see How vain thy wild regret must be, Say, Trust and Rest.

What dost thou fear? His wisdom reigns Supreme, confessed; His power is infinite, His love Thy deepest, fondest, dreams above; So, Trust and Rest.

LONDON TO PARIS DURING LUNCH

The aerodrome is quickly out of sight—but, to the officer in the wireless cabin, not out of sound. The control tower at Croydon knows exactly where you are, and will be in constant radio communication until you land. The earth below may appear to pass slowly, but that is due to the optical illusion caused by your distance from it: your actual speed is now 100 miles an hour. Soon the Channel is beneath you, and for 30 or 40 minutes you look down on blue water, with ships like toys trailing long white wakes behind them. Then the French coast, and a scene quite unlike the view you had in England. Surrey, Kent and Sussex had resembled a multi-coloured quilt—the whole surface cut up into varied shapes of different hues by hedges, roads and gardens. Northern France appears a great flat plain, with immense yellow fields intersected by narrow ditches or long white ribbons of roads. There are occasional clumps of trees and a few small towns and villages; but mostly the landscape is agricultural, and altogether a contrast to the kaleidoscopic pattern of England.

Quiet As A Train

All the time the engines hum contentedly, and you can see the effortless turning of the big air-screws. Amidships, you may look from a porthole along the length of the wings, and gain an impression of immense steadiness and power. The sound is no greater than that of an express train; the saloons, in fact, are quieter than a railway dining car. For knives and forks do not jump about, nor cups rattle in their saucers. And if you desire to walk about, you need not roll to clutch; the floor will not lurch or shake beneath you.

Suddenly the note of the engines falls, and the wings begin to slant. You can only tell this by looking at them; you yourself seem to be as level in your seat as ever. You look down. The earth is nearer, and there below you is Le Bourget, the Air Port of Paris. A gradual turning movement, a long smooth glide, and you find yourself skimming just above the grass. Inch by inch the wheels approach the ground; then they touch, and after a few more hundred yards the Hercules draws up beside the landing offices. It is a little over two hours since you left Croydon, and in another 45 minutes you will be in the centre of Paris.

Such a journey, whether made for the first or for the fiftieth time, must provide a thrill all its own. Not only in its comfort, its cleanliness and its speed is it a supreme form of first-class travel; it does represent the greatest triumph of transport yet achieved. For certain

His career in Hong Kong has been marked by the same love for his fellow-men that distinguished him in Saigon. In 1933, when the Society for the Protection of Children was formed, he at once came forward with a donation of $10,000, by this gift not only settling a fine example to others but in effect rendering possible the start of the Society's work. Now, knowing the Society to be in difficulties from lack of funds, he again comes forward with a new gift of $5,000. In 1933 he contributed a sum of $10,000 to the rebuilding fund of the Tung Wah Hospital and a further $10,000 to the Fong Bin Hospital, Canton, of which he is a committee member. Always keenly interested in promoting the welfare of the poor, he is a Director of the Tung Wah Hospital, Hon. Vice-President of the Society for the Protection of Children and Hon. Chairman of the Chung Sing Charity Club. He is also Hon. Chairman of the Chinese Civil Servants' Club and of the Chinese Athletic Association, Canton.

Mr. Wai, who is a large property-owner in the Colony, is the proprietor of the Yee Tin Tong, 182 Queen's Road Central, Patent Medicine Manufacturers, with branches in Shanghai, Canton, Saigon and Cambodia. At the opening of his offices in China he made a free gift to the public of 1,000,000 bottles of the medicinal oil manufactured by his firm, valued at some $300,000.

HOW TO BECOME UGLY
By a Beauty Specialist.
Do not cleanse your face with lotions and creams but apply powder on dry skin. Your pores will become clogged, and in a short time you will have an ugly skin.

Try as hard as you can to become sunburnt until your delicate skin cracks. You will achieve the best results by lying in the hot sun with no cream on your face; in a few days you will look like a sea-wolf.

Wash your face every morning in hot water and with bad soap, avoid any creams and cleansing lotions.

Do not wear sun glasses, not even on the beach, your eyes will become inflamed and begin to water.

After swimming do not cleanse your face with a lotion, but let the salt and sand do the damage.

Eat puddings and pies, let your figure go, dress drowsy, show your fat ankles by wearing short skirts. Do not walk along from the knees and you will look the grace of ugliness. Never have a massage done. Do not use any lotion, cream, powder, rouge or lipstick. Never do any manicure, but have broken away nails. Let your hair frame your face untidily, long and unkempt. Show your pale lips in a frown and you will have achieved the perfection of ugliness.

If you don't really want to be ugly come to the

KWANGTUNG FORCE STILL IMMOBILISED ORDERED TO HALT ADVANCE

GENERAL CHEN CHI-TANG'S DEFINITE STATEMENT

[From Our Own Correspondent]

Canton, Yesterday.

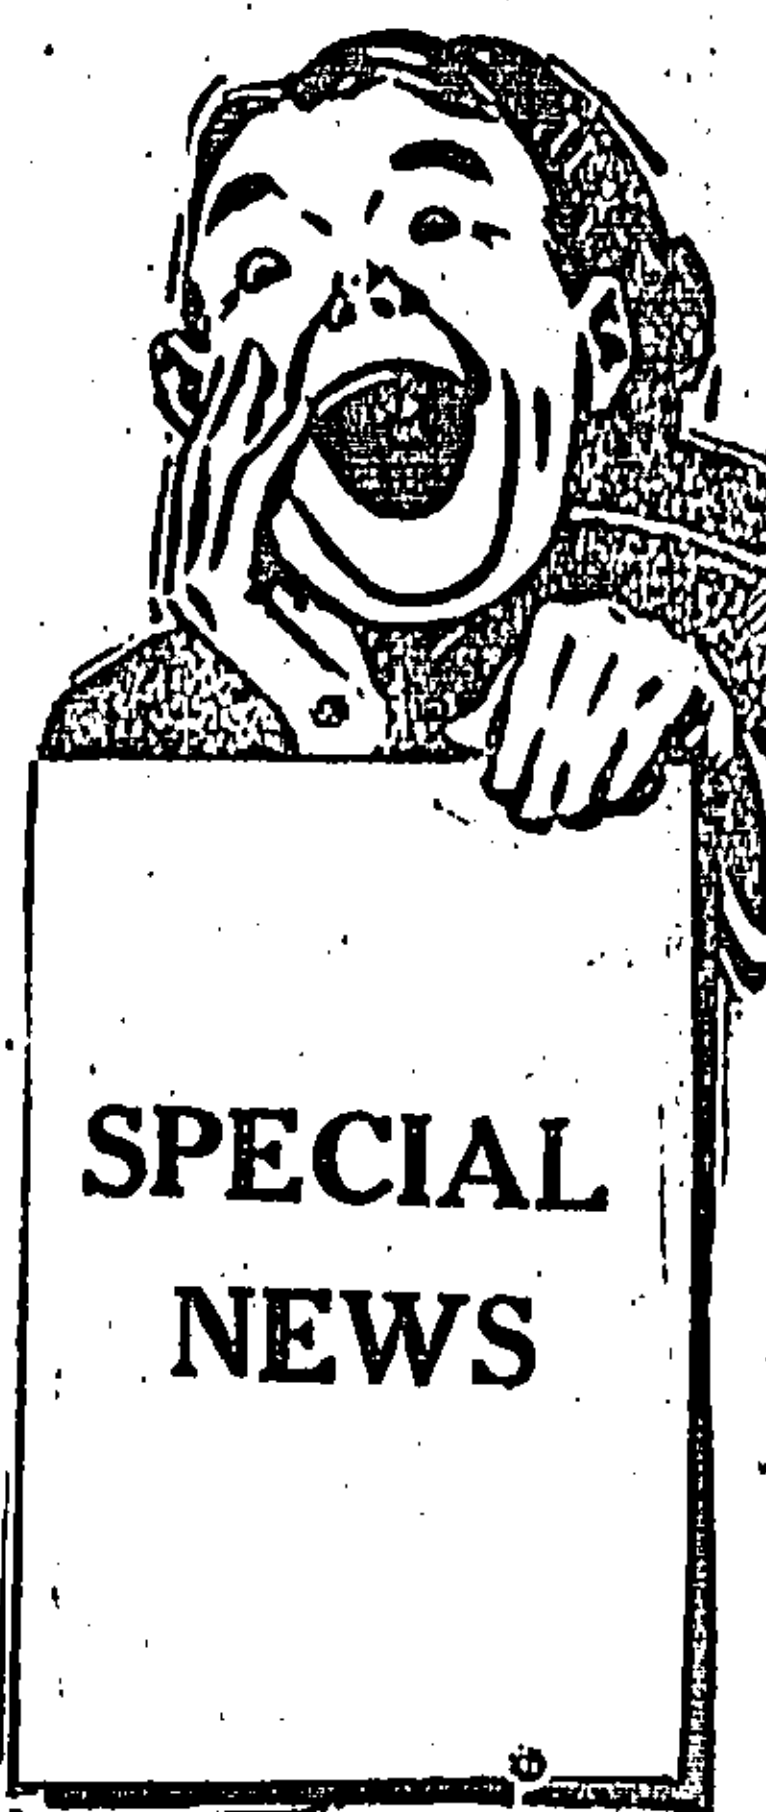

General Chen Chi-tang, head of the Kwangtung armies, has telegraphed to the military authorities in Kweichow saying that his two divisions in Kwangsi will not proceed to Kweichow owing to instructions received from General Chiang Kai-shek, Chairman of the Military Affairs Commission, ordering the expedition to halt.

"I will not move my troops until I have further instructions from Chairman Chiang," General Chen stated.

This telegram throws a new light on the reports that the Central Authorities are most anxious to have the co-operation of Kwangtung troops to join in the fight against the Kweichow Reds. At the moment, the main strength of the Communists is again in Southern Szechuen.

In the circumstances, speculation is rife here as to why General Chiang Kai-shek is holding a series of meetings with his lieutenants in Kweichow, the provincial capital.

A high official stated that General Chiang may take a flying trip to Canton or Hong Kong to interview the South-west leaders, but the official is unable to confirm the report.

LOCAL SCHOOL OF ACCOUNTANCY

New Centre For Institute Of Commerce Exams.

SUCCESSFUL RESULTS

The School of Accountancy at No. 24, Des Vaux Road Central is now the Official Centre for all examinations of Commercial subjects conducted by the Institute of Commerce (Incorporated), England, according to a letter of appointment received from The Honorary Secretary of the Institute, Dr. R. P. Booth, D.Sc., M.I.Mech.E., F.I.S.A.

Contrary to assertions made by other commercial schools, the School of Accountancy declares that this Institute does not confer its degrees to successful candidates upon the conclusion of the examinations unless the examinees have had at least five years' experience in a commercial capacity and must not be under 25 and 21 years of age for Fellowship and Associateship, respectively. However, certificates and diplomas are given to such candidates who have passed the single subject and group tests. The examinations are open to all, irrespective of age, sex, and nationality.

It is interesting to recall that this school has been singularly successful in its past efforts, particularly in December 1934 examination held locally by the International Institute of Accountants (Incorporated), in which all its students took high passes including the Gold Medal award.

A picture of the candidates, the Supervisors, and the Dean of the School appears in the Pictorial Supplement of this issue.

DUTCH BUDGET CUTS

Florin To Be Defended

The Hague, Yesterday. It is authoritatively emphasized that the Dutch Government does not intend to change its policy as a result of the fall of the Belgian franc, but there will be further drastic cuts in the Budget in order to defend the florin.—Reuter.

The Hamburg-America twin-screw motorship Cordillera arrived in Hong Kong on her maiden trip yesterday morning.

Hong Kong's Two Links With The Empire

Imperial Airways And The Trade Fair

THE Singapore papers just received give the story of Air developments projected as a result of the recent visit of Air Ministry and R.A.F. officials to Hong Kong.

More and more it becomes apparent that events are forcing Hong Kong into the fore-front of Pacific affairs.

One hopes, and would like to believe, that all who have at heart the progressive improvement of business and cultural relations between the British and Chinese people, whether they live here or at Home, will see that Hong Kong is ready to play its part in the onward and irresistible march of events.

One result must be to draw Hong Kong and Singapore closer together. At present their only bond is that of Interport sporting encounters, but a little thought will show they share mutual interests on quite a considerable scale, and they are such as lend themselves to considerable expansion, greatly to the advantage of British trade with the Chinese.

Just as the magnificent Sydney Harbour Bridge existed in the minds of a few before pen was put to paper to bring it into concrete form, so the moment in which Anglo-Chinese interests can best be worked out for the mutual benefit of both, and of the rest of the world, must be thought out long in advance.

One of the first needs is a widening of mental horizons to envisage what is meant when relation with the Chinese is discussed.

Too long has China been discussed as if it centered round Shanghai, with Hong Kong occupying the position of a poor relation. A nice quiet place to retire to when overwrought by the hectic life of the great metropolis.

Wealth In South

Let us glance at the facts. The business and commerce of China is very largely in the hands of Chinese born in the Southern provinces. Although they have emigrated to Shanghai and contributed largely to the building up of the great wealth and prominent position of Shanghai, they have also emigrated to Siam, Malaya and the Dutch East Indies.

In these rich areas they have likewise contributed very greatly to their development, and in Malaya particularly, it is no exaggeration to say that it would have been impossible for the country to have reached its present prosperity without the Chinese. To-day they form nearly half the total population, but they possess a very much greater percentage of the buying power and of the control of that country's total business.

And, be it remembered every one of them is a native of the part of China lying within a short distance of Hong Kong.

Now what does that mean from a practical point of view when trying to visualise the future developments of Anglo-Chinese relations?

Reorientation Of Ideas

Without doubt the most important fact is that the British merchant must reorientate his ideas of where this China market is, and of what it consists. He must shed his habit of thinking of it in terms of territory, and consider it rather in terms of people. People are markets—not territory.

To-day one of his markets in China is that of the Southern Chinese, and the Southern Chinese market consists primarily of the people in the provinces of South China and of Malaya, and of all that area reached through the British ports of Hong Kong and Singapore.

Thus visualised, how largely must loom the large market of the Southern Chinese in the schemes of trade development between the people of the British Empire and the Chinese. What are likely to be the principal implications of such a change, when it occurs?

It is interesting to recall that at one time in the early history of Hong Kong it was intended that the Governor of Hong Kong should be the representative of the British Government in China. Is it beyond the bounds of possibility that once again Hong Kong will play a far more important role in cementing relations between these two great trading people, the British and Southern Chinese, as the principal seat of the official British representation?

Varying Exchange

Another point that must arise when it becomes more widely recognised that Hong Kong and Singapore are but the Northern and Southern entry ports of one territory, is the question of the varying exchange between the two places. And on this subject we cannot do better than quote Mr. W. F. Spalding, who contributes regularly such enlightening articles to the Times Trade and Engineering Supplement.

As a result, he says, of Hong Kong being on a silver basis and Singapore on sterling a position arises "that many firms in the United Kingdom entirely fail to comprehend." When silver and the Hong Kong exchange falls, Singapore dealers place their orders with Hong Kong rather than London: with a rising silver and exchange market Hong Kong dealers order from Singapore, rather than from Hong Kong importers. Thus much business passes by Hong Kong, when its dollar appreciates, undoubtedly contributing to the "depression."

The remedy for this, Mr. Spalding says, is for British firms to have an office in both places so that "they would at least have the satis-

RICHBERG WARNING HEADED

ADMINISTRATION BILL IS SECRETLY DRAFTED TO EXTEND N. R. A. LIFE

Washington, Yesterday.

A secretly drafted Administration bill for the extension of the National Recovery Administration, with some modifications, was hastily introduced in the Senate yesterday after a warning by Mr. Donald Richberg, the N. R. A. chief, that strikes were threatening in the steel, coal, automobile and textile industries.

The draft provided for a partial restoration of the anti-trust laws and for code administration by an inter-state commerce commission.

Mr. Green, president of the Federation of Labour, had previously strongly advocated the extension of the N. R. A. and also demanded a 30-hour week.—Reuter.

Unless cause is shown to the contrary within three months from March 29, the name of the Union Leather Articles Company Ltd., will be struck off the Register of Companies.

fact of knowing that what came out of one pocket would go into the other pocket of the same firm rather than into the Exchequer of someone else"—as is the case when there is a branch in other parts of China. Thus we see, from only using these two examples, what great changes are likely to take place within the time that the majority of people now in Hong Kong are still in active service.

Gradual Changes

Such changes do not take place suddenly. They start imperceptibly, gathering momentum and becoming noticeable to a large and still larger circle of people—until they happen.

Many such changes are taking place before one's eyes, and Hong Kong willingly, or unwillingly, must recognise them.

The coming of Imperial Airways is one such change. The holding of the British Empire and China Trade Fair is another. Linked together in the common purpose of opening up and improving business relations and trading opportunities between the British and Chinese, both enterprises are contributing towards the awakening of Hong Kong to a better realisation of her destiny as the British outpost on the Pacific.

PRINCE HENRY WELCOMED HOME BY CITY OF LONDON

Tells Of Enthusiastic Demonstrations

PREMIER STRESSES RESULTS OF PERSONAL TOUCH

London, Yesterday. H. R. H. the Duke of Gloucester was royally welcomed home yesterday by the City of London after his seven months' Empire tour. Large crowds greeted the Duke as he drove in an open carriage with an escort of Life Guards. At Guildhall a luncheon was given in his honour, among the distinguished guests being the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Prime Minister, and members of the Cabinet. The City's address of welcome referred to the service done by the tour in strengthening the ties which bind together the peoples of the Empire in their loyalty and devotion to the throne and to the person of His Majesty the King. In his reply the Duke said that in every part of the Empire he visited he was received with the same enthusiastic demonstration of loyalty as greeted the King and Queen, his brother and the Duchess of York on similar tours.

THE ROYAL QUALITY
Proposing the Duke's toast at the luncheon, the Prime Minister said that the sincere interest His Highness took in the daily lot and interests of all he met showed the royal quality of instinctive human understanding and sympathy which generates the truest loyalty among the King's subjects. This personal touch, by its immediate effect and memories of it left behind and borne away, exerted a powerful grip on the heart of the Commonwealth and enabled it to develop as a new and noble type of the world Empire.

The Duke, in reply, said that he regarded it as a great good fortune that he had been given the opportunity of seeing so much of the Empire and its people. He urged his fellow countrymen to travel themselves and see the Empire—British Wireless Service.

SUFFOLK TO CARRY ART TREASURES

Precious Cargo For Burlington House

London, Yesterday. H.M. Cruiser Suffolk, when leaving for Portsmouth in the middle of June on her paying-off voyage, will transport from China the art treasures lent for the Chinese Art Exhibition in London.

The British Government has authorised this in recognition of the Chinese authorities' generosity in committing the treasures to a long voyage with its attendant dangers, for example piracy. It will also obviate the heavy insurance for which the organisers would be liable if the treasures were entrusted to an unarmed cargo boat.—Reuter.

CORDILLERA SKIPPER ON COLONY CHANGES

FAMOUS OPERA STAR PASSES THROUGH HONG KONG

THE twin-screw motorship Bolshoi Revolution in Russia. Of Cordillera, of the Hamburg-America Line, arrived in the Colony on her maiden trip to the Far East yesterday morning at 8 o'clock, and will sail for Shanghai at 6 o'clock this morning.

From Shanghai she will sail for Kobe and Yokohama, and return here on April 18, en route to Naples. Over 36 passengers disembarked here yesterday morning, leaving 167 bound for Shanghai and Japan.

The Cordillera is under the command of Captain Conrad D'Ottillie, who was appointed when the ship was completed two years ago.

LAST VISIT 22 YEARS AGO
"My last visit here was 22 years ago, when I was Chief Officer on board the a.s. Klautschou. Since that time I have never had the chance of visiting Hong Kong again, but I have always been working on ships of the Hamburg-America Line", Captain D'Ottillie told the Sunday Herald yesterday.

Curiously enough this is the Captain's twenty-second visit to the Colony. He has been employed by the Hamburg-America Line for over 35 years.

Captain D'Ottillie's first experience of the sea was in 1892, when he joined a sailing vessel going from Hamburg to Australia. He was 16 years of age at that time and started on his career as a cabin-boy.

In 1897 he left the vessel and joined a steamship. Later he joined the present company in which he has been employed since 1900. His age at present is 58 years.

TREMENDOUS CHANGES
"I really cannot recognise the Colony, especially the mainland. It has entirely changed since my last visit here, when no shops and hotels could be seen," the Captain said in the course of an interview with the Sunday Herald.

Captain D'Ottillie said that the voyage had been very pleasant so far, no rough weather having been experienced throughout the trip.

FAMOUS OPERA STAR
Among the passengers on board is Madame Maria Kuznetsov, well-known in Paris, London, Madrid, and New York as an opera singer. She appeared in all the prominent operas in Paris, where she made her debut after the outbreak of the

MOST INTERESTING RIVER OF WORLD

Fascination Of The Yangtze River

GLAMOUR OF ROMANCE FOR ORIENTAL MIND

Sixth in size among the rivers of the world, the stream called by Westerners the Yangtze River, is without doubt, first in interest.

This interest is not supplied by its natural features alone, but also by the extraordinary number of sites, important from an historical and literary point of view, found on its banks.

To the Oriental mind, these ku chi on Ancient Footsteps impart a glamour of romance denied the majority of Occidental travellers.

As far as the name is concerned, the Chinese call the entire stream simply River, Long River, or Great River, using in each case the word chang. Different stretches, however, have specific names, and the Yangtze refers to the portion running past Yang Chou not far from its mouth. In its upper reaches the name used is Chin-Cha Chiang—River of Golden Sand.

Gold is actually washed from the sand, but apart from this practical reason those who have passed through the famous San Hala or Three Chasms at high water cannot fail to have been struck by the singular aptness of this name. When its source is released from the grim clutch of Winter, the Great River descends, a raging, gleaming torrent of most marvellous colour. A colour impossible to describe. It is like molten copper, or as Chinese would say "red brass."

Unless cause is shown to the contrary within three months of March 29, the name of the Kowloon—New Asia Hotel will be struck of the Register of Companies.

CHARITY BALL AT HOTEL CECIL

In Aid Of Children's Hospital And Clinic

GOVERNOR PRESENT AT SUCCESSFUL FUNCTION

An enjoyable evening was spent by more than 100 couples at the Hotel Cecil last night on the occasion of the charity ball, which was held under the distinguished patronage of H.E. the Governor, Sir William Peel, K.C.M.G., K.B.E., and presided over by Sir Shou-son Chow, Kt., J.L.D., (President) in aid of the Children's Hospital and Clinic, Kowloon.

With tasteful decorations of streamers, balloons and flowers, the dining hall presented a festive scene, while the musical selections were another feature of the function.

Among those present were Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Kirk, Dr. and Mrs. Chu Tung-sung, Dr. Y. Y. Tang, Dr. Au Chau-ho, Dr. Yip Kam-wah, Miss Pearl Chow, Mr. Y. C. Kwan, Dr. D. K. Samy, Dr. T. S. Ho, Mr. George Lee, and Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Chau.

The function commenced at 8 p.m., and the opening address was made by the Chairman, Mr. R. C. H. Lim, who said:—

"As you all know the ball towards which you have each and individually contributed is to help the children's hospital and clinic of the Chinese Sisters of the Precious Blood in Kowloon. No other institution, Ladies and Gentlemen, deserves your support more than the one which you are supporting this evening. You, as citizens of Hong Kong, have done your bit.

The bit that each and every one of us does varies enormously. I do not mean to be in any way ungrateful to you for having come here, but I do wish to appeal to you and to the public in general, most ardently to show your generosity towards this free hospital for poor children. I do hope and pray that the various Clubs in Hong Kong who have the means of helping this hospital, particularly the various athletic Clubs, will do so.

Work Of Hospital

"The hospital has not been in existence for more than a few years and the work it is doing is being done quietly, but well, and with marvellous results. Several doctors, both Chinese and foreign, are giving their services gratis, and they, together with the Sisters of the Convent, are doing their utmost to meet the need of the poor population of Kowloon in battling to put down the very high rate of infant mortality.

"At present the only available space is that part of the Convent Building which, at great inconvenience, the Chinese Sisters of the Precious Blood allotted for the purpose of the Hospital and Clinic.

"Some time last year, His Excellency the Governor, Sir William Peel, graciously approved a plot of land near where the Convent now is for the purpose of building a new hospital for children. It is, I learn, for this purpose that the committee of the hospital, headed by Mr. Tse Yung-kwong, is attempting to raise the sum of $40,000 for the cost of the building. So far, I understand, nearly $15,000 has been collected and deposited in the Mercantile Bank. That, Ladies and Gentlemen, is briefly the history and aims of the hospital.

Hon. President's Fine Work

"On behalf of the Charity Ball Committee and all those who are working for the hospital, I wish first of all to thank our Patron, His Excellency, Sir William Peel, K.C.M.G., K.B.E., and J.L.D., for his interest in the hospital, which we hope one day, with your generous support, to build into an institution worthy of the Colony of Hong Kong.

"To the Hon. Sir Shou-son Chow, Kt., J.L.D., our Hon. President, we owe a great deal for his interest in the work we are doing. As Hon. President, Sir Shou-son Chow is always available to the committee, and, under his wise and sagacious guidance, the committee has been able to accomplish a good deal that would otherwise have been impossible to do.

"To the management of the Hotel Cecil I must say how very grateful I am for the sacrifice they are making in allowing us the use of this beautifully decorated hall for the occasion and for supplying us with such excellent food at such a low cost. I understand the profits from drinks will also be handed over to the ball committee. Therefore, Ladies and Gentlemen, since they have offered to assist this ball, you

FILM ESSAY COMPETITION

'THE FIRST WORLD WAR'

Your Views On Conflict May Win You Theatre Tickets

A German regiment advances across No Man's Land. Many thrilling scenes of war, hitherto unseen by the public, are revealed in the Fox Film production, "The First World War," which is coming to the King's Theatre next Friday. Edited by Lawrence Stallings, the picture presents secret films from the nation's archives—authentic, official, uncensored.

THE Great War of 1914 to 1918 was believed to be the war-to-end-war, but to-day Europe is again an armed camp; anxiety has been intensified in the Pacific, and a serious position has developed in the African continent. Where will it all lead and when will the spark be set to the powder-magazine? To-day the Sunday Herald is offering six pairs of dress circle tickets for the momentous Fox Film production, "The First World War," which will commence at the King's Theatre next Friday, for the six best essays, of not more than 500 words each, on War. Entries must reach this office before noon on Thursday.

"The First World War," it is said, is the first authentic and uncensored screen record of the great conflict—and more than that. The very sources of the World War are said to be pictured in the film, for many motion picture records of events leading up to the conflict are here given to the public for the first time. Intimate glimpses of Europe's royalty in the years before the war, of their conferences, their alignments, and their secret plans, have been entrusted to Fox Films for use in this picture.

Besides these, there are sensational and hitherto unscreened pictures of the important battles of the war, both on land and sea, and a great variety of glimpses of life behind the fronts.

Lawrence Stallings, who conceived the best-selling volume, "The First Great War," has acted in the capacity of editor for the film based on his book. Simon and Schuster, publishers of the book, have served in an advisory capacity in the making of the film, and Truman Talley is named as the producer.

The grim evidence is at hand at last—"Mankind's greatest confession." To judge from all advance reports, "The First World War" is a film not to be missed.

WHOLE LUNG TAKEN OUT

Newcastle Surgeon's Triumph

RARE OPERATION TWICE SUCCESSFUL

The successful removal of an entire lung from a girl of 18, and also from a youth of 18, is reported by Mr. George A. Mason, senior surgical registrar, Royal Victoria Infirmary, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, in the "British Medical Journal." The operation—pneumonectomy—though occasionally attempted, was in no instance successful until 1931.

The girl had had recurrent attacks of pneumonia since she was five, and was suffering from such an attack when admitted to the Royal Victoria Infirmary last year. The lung was found to be seriously diseased, and in a series of four operations was removed entire.

Massage and appropriate exercises were carried out, and the patient gained over a stone in weight. With her general health greatly improved she was discharged five months after the operation. The surgeon says that the cavity left by the operation is now only the size of a walnut.

The youth had swallowed a small stone when he was five, and coughed it up two years afterwards. Since then there had been constant lung trouble. A similar series of operations was performed, and the lung removed

SILVER JUBILEE $1 COLLECTION

To Commence Locally To-morrow

INDIAN AND PORTUGUESE MEMBERS IN CHARGE

The Silver Jubilee $1 Collection is to commence to-morrow. Consequent to the notice already published saying that collection boxes were ready for distribution and could be obtained from Mr. A. Morris of 6 Ning Young Terrace or from Mr. S. Balfour of the Colonial Secretary's Office, a number of these boxes have been sent to various firms and clubs.

It is hoped that all members of the community will be able to subscribe; members of the Indian community who have any difficulty in subscribing should communicate with Mr. J. H. Ruttonjee of No. 7, Duddell Street, Hong Kong, members of the Portuguese community with Mr. Leo d'Almada e Castro, junior of Prince's Building. The Honorable Dr. Kotewall is being assisted by the Chinese Chamber of Commerce in sending round collection boxes, and the Chinese population should communicate with him. Furthermore the District Officers, North and South are arranging for boxes to be sent round in the New Territories and the Islands. The Secretary of the St. Vincent de Paul Society has also promised to send collection boxes among the Catholic population of the Colony.

Lady Southern, O.B.E., Mrs. Kotewall and Mrs. Braga will be glad to help the collection among the ladies of the Colony by receiving applications for collection tins or subscription lists.

The appeal runs as follows: His Majesty King George V's Silver Jubilee

Appeal on behalf of Charities. "On the 6th May the British Empire is giving thanks and praise that for 25 years His Majesty King George V has been preserved to bear the sceptre of sovereignty and maintain the unity of the Empire. His Majesty's great interest in all forms of charity is universally recognised and it is known that His Majesty desires this auspicious occasion to be in some manner dedicated to assisting charitable objects. It has, therefore, been decided to collect funds throughout this Colony for charitable purposes, the subscriptions not to exceed $1 and humbly to pray His Majesty to nominate the charities in this Colony to which the moneys collected should be devoted.

"The Charitable Collection Sub-committee is providing boxes and subscription lists for the purpose of the collection and all those who wish to assist in this laudable object are asked to communicate with the Honorable Dr. R. H. Kotewall, C.M.G., J.L.D., of China Building, Hong Kong, who is representing the Chinese Sub-committee formed for this purpose or with Mr. A. Morris of 6 Ning Young Terrace or Mr. S. F. Balfour of the Colonial Secretariat, Hong Kong, who will arrange for the collecting boxes or subscription lists to be forwarded.

This appeal is issued by the Silver Jubilee Committee of Hong Kong. Receipt From Bank

As soon as they are filled the collection boxes or the subscription lists, together with the money, should be taken to the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, where the moneys will be credited to the Silver Jubilee Charitable Collection Fund. A receipt will be given at once for them, and in the case of collection boxes, a receipt will be sent later signed by one of the Cashiers of the Bank stating the amount that was received from each box.

Every employer should see that a collection box or a subscription list is passed round his offices, likewise every Secretary of a club; boxes could be passed round at concerts, theatres and social gatherings. Everyone interested is requested to write for a collection box or a subscription list without delay.

with the galvanocautery 30 days after the first operation.

In this case the surgeon says the boy's general condition is steadily improving, and it is hoped he will soon go to a convalescent home.

NAVY BEAT EAST LANC IN KEEN ENCOUNTER

BOWERS & CROOKS PROMINENT

PHILLIPS VERY RELIABLE

The Navy sprang a surprise yesterday when they defeated the East Lancs in their Second Division encounter at Sookunpoo by 4 goals to 1.

In spite of the score, the game was very evenly and keenly contested, the Navy having the better of the play through their being able to stand up better on a rain-soaked pitch.

Phillips, the Navy custodian, proved very reliable, making many good saves and effective clearances. His anticipation of high shots that were likely to shoot anywhere after bouncing on the wet ground was excellent.

In the defence Watson and Courtney were not very safe at first, but as the game progressed their earlier mischievous became less frequent, and they very seldom allowed the soldier forwards to pass them in a combined movement.

Bowers Prominent

The intermediate line were well tested and found to be sound. Bowers, being a good pivot, never allowed Walkden to move far unattended and distributed the ball to his forwards with many fine passes.

In the attack the inside trio, Barstead, Partington, and Cox, were the most outstanding of a very good line.

The soldiers did not produce anything like their usual form and on a dry day the result would probably have been different. Cox and Walkden in the forward line were very weak, the mischievous and had judgment of Cox, who should have scored at least twice, considerably helping to bring about their downfall.

Crooks Impresses

Crooks in the intermediate line was a tower of strength, never being far from the heels of Whymann and being prominent in both defence work and attack.

Harmsworth, in goal, had a most trying time, the goals registered against him would have beaten any custodian, and the handicap of being often stuck in the mud, caused him to fall in many of his efforts.

The soldiers opened the attack and within a few minutes came very near to scoring when Mather sent across a fast shot from the right wing with Phillips well out of goal, the ball passing across the goalmouth and going over the line.

For some 15 minutes the play was very even the ball being continually swung from end to end, both keepers being called upon to make a number of dangerous saves.

Partington Opens Scoring

Following a period of pressure on the Lancs goal, Partington opened the score, when, receiving just inside the penalty area, he sent in a fine shot to the roof of the net, Radcliffe mischievous badly in attempting to clear.

Just before the interval Radcliffe equalised, following a run down on the left wing by Griffin who sent across a fine centre.

After the resumption the Navy became aggressive and had the Lancs penned in with the exception of occasional breakaways which culminated in bad finishing and erratic shooting.

Barstead Heads In

From a centre by Whymann, Barstead sent in a fine header just in front of the goalmouth which had Harmsworth well beaten to give the Navy the lead once again.

The Lancs rallied for a time, but failed to penetrate to within scoring distance, and within five minutes Crawford scored twice for the Navy as the result of fine passing from the left wing.

Navy:—Phillips; Watson, Courtney; White, Bowers, Wright; Whymann, Barstead, Partington, Crawford and Wilcox.

E. Lancs:—Harmsworth; Harwood, Radcliffe; Howley, Ekersley, Crooks; Mather, Cox, Walkden, Ridings and Griffin.

LINCOLNS WIN OVER UNIVERSITY

Blake's Plucky But Unavailing Efforts

PENALTY KICK MISSED

Despite the heavy rain which fell throughout, and the very heavy state of the ground following this week's rain, a very fast and good game of football was witnessed at the Valley yesterday when the Lincolns narrowly defeated the University by the odd goal in five in their Second Division encounter.

Both teams experienced great difficulty in retaining their grip on the ground, but a very good standard of football was maintained and in drier weather it would have been an excellent game.

The Lincoln eleven proved the more dashing and they fully deserved their win, but the University fought back very hard during the second half and very nearly starved off defeat. Blake was the hero of his side, he was all over the field but he was at his best during the second half; he was instrumental in scoring the under-graduates' only two goals and was very unlucky in not being able to net the equalising goal.

Lincolns Bustle Lim

Lim played very well in the University goal, but the greasy ball was too much for him and he dropped it more often than not. The Lincolns forwards were quick to take advantage of this weakness and every shot directed goalwards was speedily followed up.

Toyne played a very good game, and, in fact, the teams were well matched, individually, and all the players gave of their best. Play opened very evenly, the first 15 minutes being mainly played in mid-field. Dobbs started things moving after 15 minutes when he received the ball in an excellent position about two yards from the goal, but skidded on the greasy ground and shot wide. Then followed a promising attack by the Lincolns, three goals being scored in as many minutes.

Three Quick Goals

Broughton centred beautifully for Toyne to open the scoring with a "sitter," and in the next moment Toyne sent in a fine shot which Lim caught; but could not hold, the ball falling to his feet for Rush to bundle over the line. Lim dropped another from Dobbs, but Toyne shot wide. In the twentieth minute of play Dobbs scored a beautiful goal, a hard shot from 40 yards going in like a rocket.

Toyne had further bad luck when he missed his footing and shot wide after taking the ball into the goalmouth from the wing. Just before half-time Too made a fine effort which Taylor just reached to punch over the top for a corner.

From the resumption after the interval the undergraduates took the upper hand for some 10 minutes but were unfortunate. Blake made a few good attempts, but Martin and Shaw, in spite of the quagmire around their charge, cleared excellently.

Penalty Missed

Dobbs missed an opportunity of increasing the soldiers' lead when after 20 minutes play he missed a penalty awarded to Toyne for a foul charge against Ang. From Soltan, at left-back, being conspicuous for their stout-hearted defence. Hesse eventually broke through the Resolute's defence from a long forward pass and sent Pracht away to beat Vesely with a ground shot. The Resolute equalised five minutes after the commencement of the second half, when Nunko took possession from a centre by Habermann to beat Luehring with a left-footed drive.

The closing minutes of the game were very exciting, the Resolute throwing away a penalty by deliberately kicking behind their own play, but Pracht, the local inside-left, snapped up a neat pass by Hesse to place the issue beyond doubt.

CLUB TROUNCE SOUTH CHINA

Duncan Scores Four Of Seven Goals

FISHER'S BRIGHT DISPLAY

The Club gained an easy victory over South China by 7 goals to 2 in their Second Division soccer match at Caroline Hill yesterday.

Bad weather undoubtedly spoiled South China's chances and also considerably hampered the Club players, but they settled down more comfortably than the Chinese eleven.

The Club forwards were the best performers throughout the contest and Duncan, their leader, gave a great display, netting four of the Club's goals. Two of these were with penalty kicks, but, nevertheless, he certainly was mainly responsible to keeping the forward line together, and it was only the bad state of the ground that hampered them from scoring further goals, their combined movements being very good.

Fisher, on the right wing worked well and often had his opponent guessing with neat tactics before finally sending across good centres. The Chinese were not slow in attacking and Binnie and Hynes received a gruelling test under awkward conditions, but they successfully averted several dangerous shots.

Duncan Converts Penalty

The first goal came from a penalty awarded the Club for alleged fouling by Cheung Yin-Chuen in the area. Duncan took the kick and netted. There was no further score before the interval.

The Club scored their second goal after Li Ho-Chuen, who was defending South China's goal, had rushed out to clear. He did manage to kick the ball into play, but before he could recover his proper position between the posts Duncan had rushed in and netted with a fast shot.

South China now tried desperately to open their account and were rewarded when Chow Kwong received a nice centre from Lai Pat-Choi to score from close quarters.

The Club replied with two very quick goals through Farrow, from 25 yards, and Duncan. The Club's fifth goal was scored from a free kick taken by Hopkins.

Just afterwards South China scored their second goal when Lai Pat-Choi sent the ball home from close range. The Club's sixth goal was from another penalty kick, Duncan after netting. Just before the final whistle the Club added their seventh goal through Fisher their right winger.

Club:—Sterling; Hynes, Dinnie; Nicholls, Furrow, Binnie; Fisher, Hopkins, Duncan, Williams and Slong. South China:—Li Ho-chuen; Tang Chung-pak, Cheung Yin-chuen; Wan Cho-lok, Ho Chi-wing, Yau Wa-hing; Kok Yau-loi, Lai Pat-choi, Chow Kwong-kwong, Li Wing-on and Mok Yin-song.

Spindler and Brunge were the between them caused all the pick of the Resolute's attack and anxiety, Rosellins, the leader, being much too slow.

Soltan's Good Defence

The Deutscher Klub attacked in the first minute, but thereafter the Resolute enjoyed most of the play, Luehring, the local custodian, and Soltan, at left-back, being conspicuous for their stout-hearted defence.

Hesse eventually broke through the Resolute's defence from a long forward pass and sent Pracht away to beat Vesely with a ground shot. The Resolute equalised five minutes after the commencement of the second half, when Nunko took possession from a centre by Habermann to beat Luehring with a left-footed drive.

The closing minutes of the game were very exciting, the Resolute throwing away a penalty by deliberately kicking behind their own play, but Pracht, the local inside-left, snapped up a neat pass by Hesse to place the issue beyond doubt.

SENIOR LEAGUE SOCCER TO-DAY

LINCOLNS TO MEET
S. CHINA "A"

FOUR THIRD DIVISION GAMES DOWN FOR DECISION

Two First Division games will feature to-day's football programme, and, providing that the weather clears up, we will probably see some of the best soccer of the year in the Lincolns v South China "A" clash on the Sookunpoo ground.

The Navy are fielding a very strong team for their clash with the Fuellers on the Causeway Bay ground. The Fuellers, are one of the most promising teams that have been seen this season, and are expected to put up very stern fight. If they retain their recent form they may even go to the extent of snatching both points.

In addition, four Third Division games will also feature to-day's programme. Next Wednesday the Saints meet the Police at Kowloon and a keen struggle is anticipated.

The following is to-day's programme, giving the favoured teams in capital letters:

FIRST DIVISION
Navy v Navy
(Causeway Bay, 4.30 p.m.)
S. CHINA "A" v S. CHINA "A"
(Sookunpoo, 4.30 p.m.)
THIRD DIVISION
Fuellers v Fuellers
(Sookunpoo, 3 p.m.)
E. LANCs v R.A.O.C.
(Navy, 3 p.m.)
ENGINEERS v R.E.C.R.I.
(Chatham Rd., 4.30 p.m.)
Police v RECREIO
(Kowloon, 3 p.m.)

Wednesday
FIRST DIVISION
Police v POLICE
(Kowloon, 4.45 p.m.)

EASTERN ENJOY MUDLARKING

Just before half-time, the Eastern scored with a fine goal from Cheung Shiu Hong who netted with a powerful drive from 20 yards. It was a well deserved goal.

Penalty Spot Missing

Shortly after the interval an amusing incident occurred. The referee awarded the Athletic a penalty kick for alleged fouling by an Eastern player, but the mud was so heavy around the Eastern's goal area that there was a temporary lapse whilst the referee and players searched for the penalty spot! Chau Shui Chuen took the penalty for Athletic, but Ng Chi Nam made a brilliant save. It was not long after that the Eastern staged a series of surprise raids on the Athletic goal, and, despite clever work by their defence, the Eastern scored three times in almost as many minutes. Their third came from Kwok Ying Wai, and a good pass from the Eastern's right flank gave him his chance again, and he netted the fourth goal in fine style.

Before the Athletic had much time to recover, they were too busy in defence the Eastern added their fifth and final goal, again through Kwok Ying Wai, who took every chance of scoring with very deliberate shots.

Eastern:—Ng Chi-nam; Fung Yu-wai, Lai Ping-choi, Ng Ying-kay, Lau Kin-fai, Chan Yun-fat, Leo Bing-tong, Kwok Ying-wai, Fung Chai-poi, Cheung Shui-hing, and Sing Ming-sing.

Athletic:—Ni Win-long; Moon-wing, Chau Shui-chum; Nui Fat-soo, Chan Man, Ho Kai-ming; Li Wing-song, Pan Kam-hung, Wong Wing-lu, Au Kiu-fung and Li Ping-shu.

PRINCE OF WALES PRESENT

London, Yesterday. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales travelled by train to Liverpool yesterday morning to witness the Grand National Steeplechase, which was run in presence of the largest crowd ever seen at Aintree. Twenty-seven horses started, but only six finished the course. Those falling out included the famous steeplechaser Golden Miller, which was the shortest-priced favourite in the history of the race.

Major Furlong's Reynoldstown, at 22 to 1, was first, Lady Lindsays Blue Prince at 40 to 1, second and Mr. J. Whitney's Thomond third, at 9 to 2.—British Wireless Service.

K.C.C. DANCE AGAIN BIG SUCCESS

70 Couples Present

There was a fairly large attendance at the Kowloon Cricket Club dance last night, which proved to be another merry affair, despite the fact that many were kept away by the storm which broke over Kowloon shortly after 9.30 p.m. Late couples arrived after the cinema shows had closed, and there were about 70 couples on the floor for the last dance.

GRAVES RESEMBLE RABBIT WARREN

Dogs Have "Tug-of-War"
With A Wreath

A letter was read at the annual meeting of the Harlow (Essex) Parochial Council stating that dogs were running amok in the churchyard. The writer had seen two dogs having a "tug-of-war" with a wreath. Some of the graves, he added, resembled a rabbit warren.

The vicar, the Rev. H. L. Botthamley, said he would like it known that the churchyard was not a suitable place in which to exercise dogs. There was a right of way through the churchyard, but he hoped residents would respect God's acre. It was recently reported that flowers were being stolen from graves.

MAN SEES GHOST OF HIS FATHER

Tragic And Strange Letter

MURDER AND SUICIDE

A man's remarkable letter about "seeing" his father, who had been dead about five years, was read at a Chichester inquest on John Ogburn Holt, 64, of Orchard-street, his wife, Sarah Ann, 47, and two sons Cyril and Derrick, aged 14 and 11.

Mr. Holt was a builder, a former town councillor and son of an ex-Mayor of Chichester. On Saturday he was found dead near a gas stove in the scullery of his house. His wife and two sons were dead upstairs with terrible head injuries.

Sergt. Bell read the following letter which he had found in the house addressed to Mr. Holt's son, Mr. J. O. Holt, now working at Rugby:—

"Dear Jack, I was finishing shutting up when you should arrive but my father, your grandfather Holt. You will remember him. I wanted to call your mother, but he did not want her. He wanted to talk to me. He wanted me to go with him and take over an equal partnership in the business as we were always together. He wanted me to go on ahead for a bit and the rest to follow later. He said I would bring your mother and the two boys with me. It would be easier for her and better for the boys in the way of outlook.

"After we had talked it over he said he would make all arrangements and come back for us in the morning. Mother will be surprised when she gets there, but she won't mind as she never liked Chichester since the last affair. I was so long talking that I forgot to ask his last address. He looked exceedingly well, and said my mother was well and would be pleased to see us. I must close now as I want a good sleep before starting."

Financial Difficulty
Caroline Gertrude King, of Orchard-street, Chichester, a sister of Mrs. Holt, said the night before the tragedy there seemed no trouble overhanging the family.

Roland Wreford, an employee, said when he saw Mr. Holt on Saturday morning he looked pale and very nervous. He knew Mr. Holt was in financial trouble. Last Tuesday Mr. Holt was fined £22 and ordered to pay at the rate of £20 a month arrears of £96 for health and unemployment insurance. During that week no wages were paid, but to some of the labourers Mr. Holt gave £1 each.

Det.-Sergt. J. R. Bell stated that in one of the bedrooms of Mr. Holt's house he found a hat-chest covered with blood.

Dr. A. M. Barford, police surgeon, said Mr. Holt died from poisoning by potassium cyanide. The jury returned a verdict that Mr. Holt murdered his wife and two sons and then committed suicide while of unsound mind.

Religions That Have No Theology

(By Phyllis Juby)

WESTERN students are somewhat disconcerted when they come to study the Chinese philosophy and lines of thought; a philosophy which never developed logic and considered it irrational to think of dissociating matter and form, a religion without theology, and a science proceeding by intuition. It is remarkable, however, that although their ways of expressing themselves are so different, most of the discoveries of Western philosophy are the very axioms of Chinese philosophy of thousands of years ago. Evolution, identity of cause and effect, indestructibility of matter and spirit, polarity of the forces of nature are starting points of the most prominent systems of Chinese philosophy.

Philosophic Religion

No system or dogma of theology developed in the early religion of China, thus leaving philosophy an absolute liberty of development. Philosophy, in return, never put itself in antagonism with the religious instincts of the people. Indeed, the roots of both Chinese religion and philosophy were closely intertwined in the first origin of Chinese philosophy, and they have never been separated. The three systems, Confucianism, with its Bible of ethic-political writings of the sceptic philosophers Confucius and Mencius, Taoism, with the ancient book of metaphysical mysticism of Lao Tse, and Buddhism, with the writings of the Mahayana school, are as much distinct systems of philosophy as they are distinct religions.

The history of Chinese philosophy would thus be quite unintelligible separated from the religions. There is very little known definitely about the foundation of Chinese philosophy, the primitive religion of China, The Chinese classics lead one to believe that it was a system of Shamanism and nature worship generally. The ancestors of the Chinese were early under the influence of a feeling for the mysterious powers of nature, and expressed their sense of the Infinite. They made sacrifices to the powers of nature, especially the sun and moon. The written character for "brilliant," "abundant" and "affluent" is defined as meaning beautiful words from the sun, ideographic of beauty and the mouth which is speaking the words; clearly a reference to sun-worship. The spirits of the winds, mountains, forests; the dragon spirits of the clouds; spirits of ancestors were worshipped by incantations, music and dances.

The idea of the "Azure Heaven" is used interchangeably; now the embodiment of the unity and pre-established harmony in nature, and now as the visible material heaven, indicating, perhaps, a conflict between the Shamanistic idea of a plurality of powers in nature, and some Theistic intuition. But the main idea of Chinese thought through all the centuries has been that nature, though in the dual form of heaven and earth, is an organic harmonious whole, and indissolubly interwoven with the life of man, who is regarded as the centre of the universe.

Early Philosophy

The law of nature is the simple and universal pattern for all human relations, the intimate connection between the physical and moral world. From that theme successive philosophies developed.

Creation out of nothing is an idea foreign to the Chinese mind. Nature's spontaneous self-development was in accordance with a common plan actually centring in man. This early philosophy gave rise to a two-fold literature; one of fanciful expositions and applications of diagrams, another a prosy literature which Confucius ultimately analysed, condensed and edited.

But some centuries before Confucius lived an original thinker, Lao-Tse. He believed in life as a mere episode in the harmony of eternity; in a realm of higher truth born of nature itself. His cosmic conception was surrounded with a halo of mysticism; man conforming to earth, earth to heaven, and heaven to the eternal principle. But it was a theory opposed to superstition, and it was an irony that his almost cynically naturalistic philosophy should become the foundation for a cult of superstitious nature. But it was this cult, of course, that made Taoism popular. The character for "talent," "virtue" and "learning" became consequently a picture-graph of a Taoist wizard dwelling in a mountain.

Need Of The Time

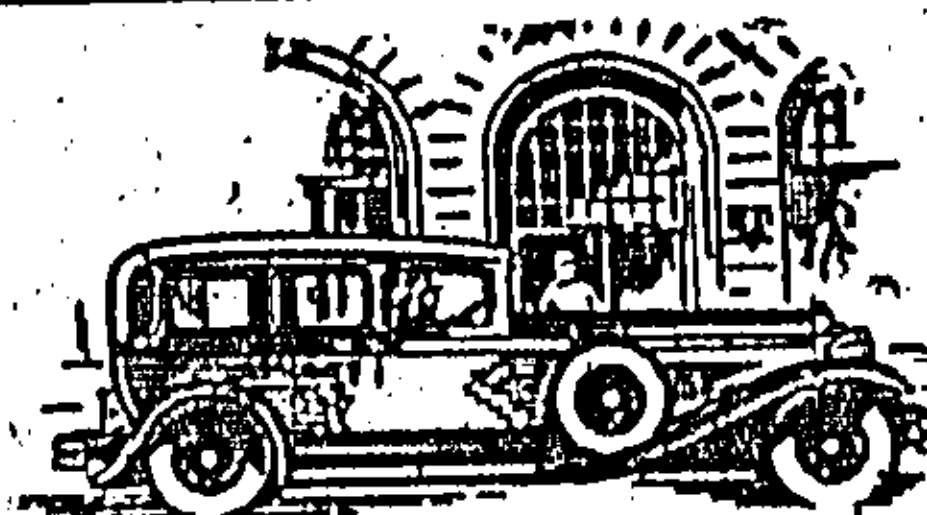

During the Chou dynasty (1122-249 B.C.), cold-blooded crime, intense cunning and cruelty were rife in an unhappy China; and the school of Confucius was but one of the many well-known schools founded during these centuries to formulate some kind of plan for alleviating the suffering of the people by creating some conditions of human society that would render life more bearable. A universal search after truth sprang from the need of the time. These conditions gave Chinese philosophy its specific stamp.

No time was found now to study the objective side of cosmogony; all forces were concentrated on solving the practical problem of an ideal state of human society.

Confucius based his teaching on the theory that human society is dependent upon the natural sympathy of one man toward another. This sympathy begins within each man's immediate circle and from there flows out further with increasing intensity. Thus the aim was wholly ethical; the goal was the highest good.

The theory of the correct definition of names was the path to this good. Confucius declares that

MOTERING NOTES . .

AMERICA'S DEBT TO EUROPE

New Cars Feature Many British Ideas

It is commonly said that in most forms of mechanical progress the United States leads the way. As regards automobiles, it is conceded that the petrol engine was invented and developed in France and Germany, but since then, it is asserted, the land of Duryea, Ford and Chrysler has shown how they should be made and improved.

In view of these claims it is interesting to read the specifications and descriptions of the newest American cars staged at the recent New York show. The general impression they leave is that American engineers are just beginning to discover the value of ideas which Britain tried and adopted years ago.

Forward Engine Mounting

The big idea of the 1935 American, the feature most widely claimed, is forward engine mounting with its attendant benefits of better weight-distribution and bringing all seats within the wheelbase. This was introduced by Lord Nuffield on the Wolseley two years ago.

The most widely-advertised mechanical novelty gives pre-selective gear-changing in exactly the same fashion as on Armstrong-Sideleys, though by different means. The most striking feature of the new bodies, apart from streamlining (which is certainly not American in origin) is the universal appearance of the built-in luggage boot. Where or when that started over here I do not know, but I call to mind the Riley Nine of 1927, which also pioneered constant-mesh, silent gears, another boast of recent Americans.

HINTS ON SAFE DRIVING

Never Overtake While Turning A Bend

It is a safe principle to remember never to overtake on a bend, and never to give the pass-on signal to a car hooting from behind and signifying its intention to overtake you if you know that a bend is approaching or if you see heavy traffic approaching from the opposite direction. Apart from this, when the road is clear and when it is not, apply your brakes before taking the bend, and just as you are on the top of the curve, accelerate again gently so that as you get into the straight again towards the last third of the bend, you are again doing a good speed. This means maximum safety with minimum waste of time and loss of consistent speed. It will also mean less wear and tear on the brake drums, the linings, and the tyres, and there will be less chances of either turning turtle or of hurtling over the edge of the road into a paddy field or over a bridge or fence.

SEWING THROUGH PLYWOOD

New Machine At Morris Factory

The Morris factory, which is always on the look-out for new appliances which will improve still further the quality of its motor-cars, is now employing a very advanced type of sewing machine in its body-trimming department.

This machine actually sews through plywood, stitching down leather and rexine at a speed comparable to that of the usual type of domestic machine. The rate of operation is 700 stitches a minute, the needles being specially designed for this work.

This process represents a considerable advance on the former method of fixing the trimming by means of tacks. It is not only more rapid, but offers longer service to the motorist, since there is little likelihood of the trimming becoming detached from the board.

REDUCES BLOW-OUT RISK

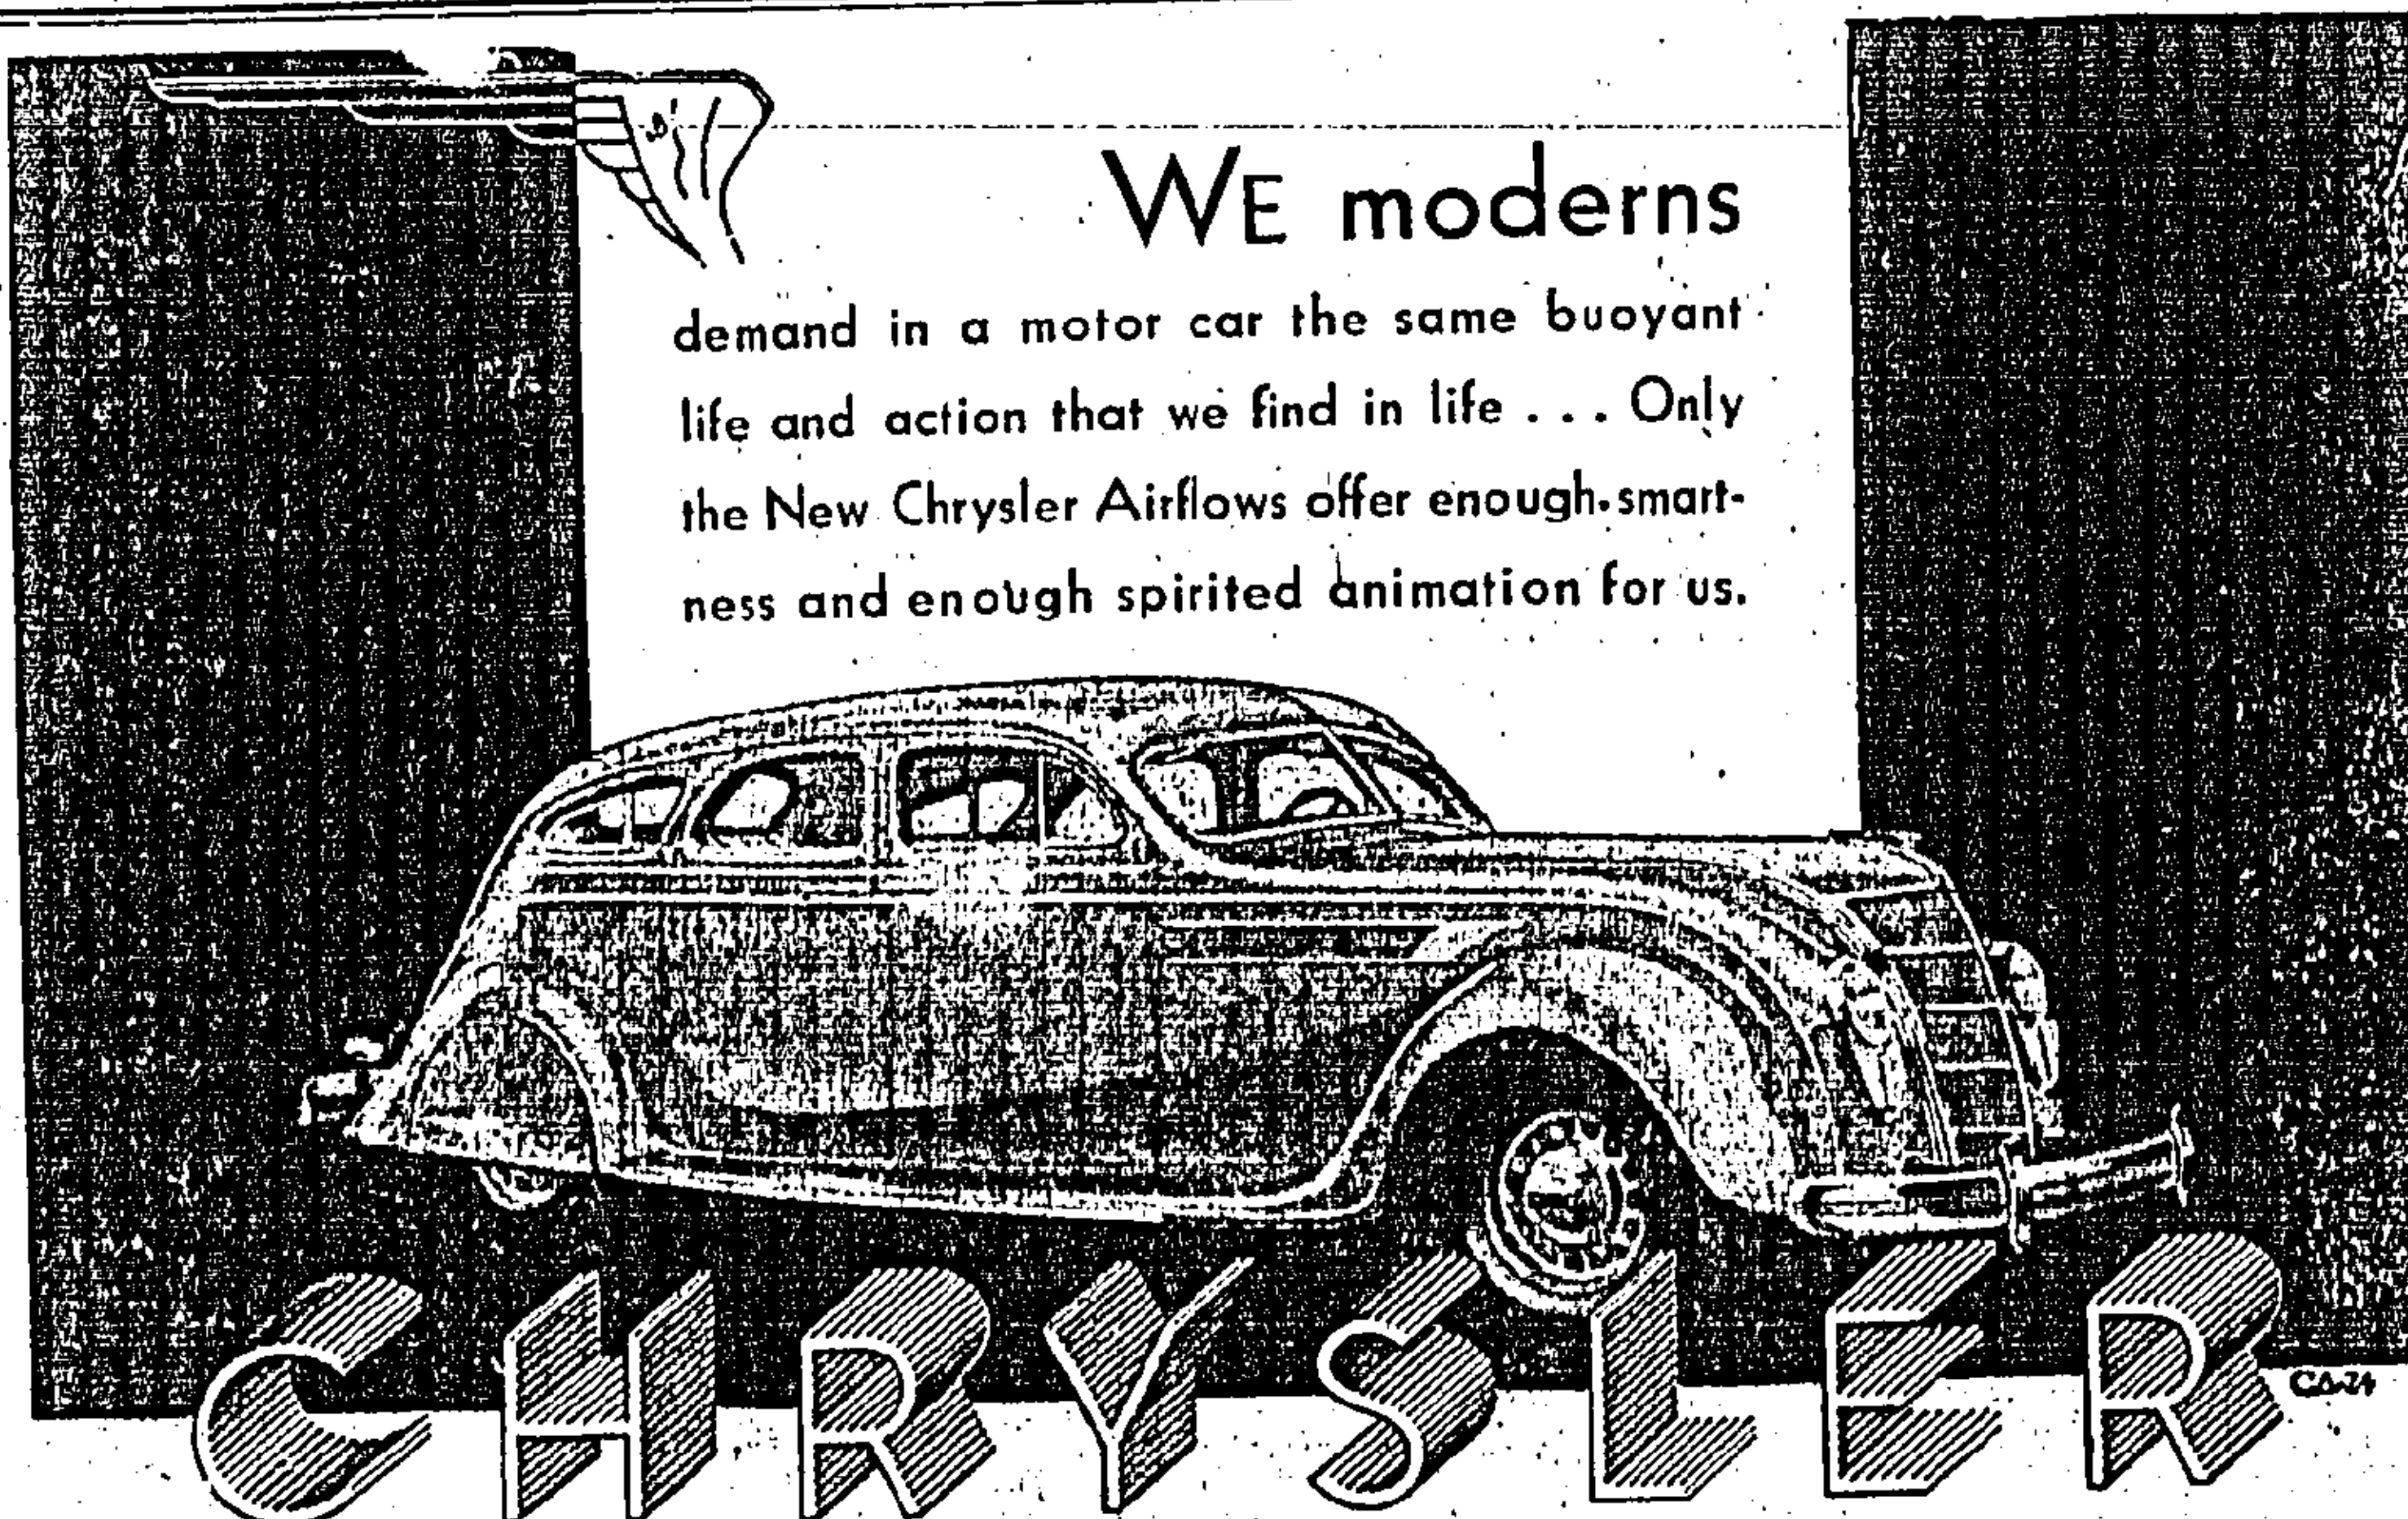

"Tyre Guard" Invented

The "tyre guard," a wheel attachment designed to prevent accident in case of blow-out, has been developed by the American Tyre Guard Company of Detroit. The invention of Herbert V. Ludwick, wheel engineer formerly with the Budd Wheel Corporation, the device is an extra metal rim or wheel attached to the inner side of the regular wheel.

When a blow-out occurs or a tyre goes flat, the car rides on the inner wheel. The device, it is said, minimizes the shock and keeps the car from swerving, besides preventing damage to rims, tyres and tubes.

MORE CARS IN AMERICA

There were approximately 1,000,000 more vehicles in operation in the United States in 1934 than there were in the previous year.

SAPPING THE DEFENCE

(By Lt.-Col. H. M. Beasley)

BOTH success and failure in Contract are measured by the winning of the tricks. Luck will, in many instances, play an important role, but sound bidding and good play of the cards will in the long run be the dominant factor.

The play of the cards is probably by far the most neglected part of the game. The working of the time factor and little intricacies in the play cannot be learnt over-night.

A very instructive hand which is illustrative of one of the finer points in play shows how important it is for the declarer to look ahead in the very early stages of the game, planning the play of the hand to anticipate the probable and possible lines of defence which can be used against him.

Among the many plays which are designed to prevent one's opponents from making full use of their hands, a great majority are the conventional entry-killing plays which remove high cards from an opponent's hand before he has an opportunity of making full use of them.

The timing of the play at Contract is such that very often an entry card in an opponent's hand does not appear to be of much importance in the early stages of the game.

Removing Entry Cards

Subsequently, however, after several rounds have been played, it transpires that this card is of great advantage and should have been removed.

Both in Suit and No Trump Contracts there are three good reasons for removing entry cards from an adversary's hand:

- (a) To prevent an opponent from cashing in winning tricks which you know he holds;
- (b) To prevent an opponent from leading through some of your high cards when there is a possibility that the position of the missing honours may be unfavourable to you;
- (c) To prevent an opponent from obtaining the lead, and leading a suit which his partner can ruff.

It is therefore extremely important that the declarer, in planning the play of the hand, should (1) anticipate by several moves any brilliant lines of defence which may be planned against him, and

2. Foresee the fact that the success of this defence depends on the existence of an entry card in the hand of one adversary.

Finally, he must effectively cut out any chance of his opponents transferring the lead to the only hand which would render this particular line of defence possible.

Here is the illustrating hand: The final Contract is 4 Spades by South, and East has doubled.

North:

The opening lead by West is the Eight of Diamonds. This trick is won by East's Ace, and the Queen is returned. South wins with the King. How should South play this hand?

An Ominous Card
South will certainly lose one trick in Spades, one in Hearts, and one in Diamonds. He can the advance sale window to buy two in the mezzanine for the night of January 20.

Outside it was still snowing. A white Christmas. I looked at the fashionable people coming in, and my stomach fell all hollow.

So we went to a movie. In the darkness I did something very melodramatic: I took the rose out of my button-hole and squeezed it to pieces in my hands.

After the show Grace noticed it was missing. I said that I must have lost it in the crowd. She looked at me, and then we chattered very gaily about the absurdity of the picture.

The snow had turned to slush and we had to slush our way through noisy crowds to the subway.

CHICAGO GANGSTER "FARMS" MURDER

Receives £3,200 And Pays Out £600

CALLOUS CONFESSION

A Chicago South Side gangster, Walter Murphy, has confessed to a jury that he had arranged a murder in the words: "Sure, we got him bumped off."

Murphy was giving evidence as to the death of Mr. Eli Daiches, head of an advertising agency, who was found shot at the wheel of his car. Murphy declared that he had been paid $16,000 (£3,200) for the murder, but that he had "farmed it out" to another gangster, now dead, for $3,000 (£600).

IF HE DIED

This evidence was given during the trial of Irving Weitzman in connection with the murder of Daiches. The State's case is that Irving's brother, Louis Weitzman, would inherit the Daiches Advertising Agency and a life insurance policy of $300,000 (£60,000) if Daiches died.

foresee the possibility of losing two tricks in Spades. After winning the second trick with the King of Diamonds, he should lead a small club, and win with the King in Dummy, on which East plays the Eight. The Eight of Clubs is an ominous card, and South should therefore make a mental note of the fact that this may be a singleton, or East may hold a doubleton. This is followed by a Spade lead from North, on which East plays the ten, South winning with the Queen.

South should now come to the conclusion that the two remaining Spades are probably held by East, because East's double was more than likely based on the Ace Jack 10 of Trumps. Now comes the crucial point—what should South now lead?

At first sight it would appear necessary to return to Dummy with the Club, and lead through the Spade Ace once more. Should South decide on this line of play, on the second round of Clubs, East will now play the three, an indication to West that he held only two Clubs, and therefore when the second round of Spades is led from North, East will play the Ace of Spades and lead a small Heart. This lead will enable West to win the trick and return a small Club, which East will ruff, and thus defeat the Contract.

Simple Solution

A wise South must foresee this possibility. He must realise that East, having bid Diamonds, supported Hearts and doubled Spades, can hold at most two Clubs. It is suicidal, therefore, to allow West to get the lead after East's last Club is gone. But a simple solution to this difficulty is to allow West to lead before East is in a position to ruff Clubs. South's next play is therefore, his singleton Heart, on the father of Miss Kitty West can win this trick, but the Masters, the B.B.C. crooner, at lead, does him no whit of good. Pendleton, near Manchester, that He can return a Club in the hope he had kept his illness secret for that East had a singleton, and this is won in Dummy and East must follow, whereupon a Spade Lawrence Masterson, 55, a fore-is led. East puts up the Ace, man painter, of Broughton-road, and now when he leads a small Heart, South ruffs and captures that he was suffering from lead the Jack of Spades with his King, Pendleton, near Manchester, that before there is any danger of its report the matter in case he lost winning a trick.

By means of this play, South succeeds in losing only one Spade, one Heart, and one Diamond, and the contract of four Spades is fulfilled.

THE PHILOSOPHERS OF CHINA

reality evolves out of chaos into cosmos through the very fact that accident, by means of the names of things, causes reality to acquire a fixed association. This theory was applicable mainly to concrete human relationships; and thus it comprised a well-defined system of human society. Each member of society occupies the position corresponding to his name, be he father or son, hence each has an appropriate share of duties and rights. Thus, the graduation was from the cultivation of the individual to organization of family, to administration of state, to the pacification of the world.

Confucius The Sceptic

Confucius himself was too sceptical to admit of a metaphysical world influencing human action. He would have nothing to say on the subject of immortality, being concerned only with this life and its obligations and regarding speculation on the unknown as a waste of time: "I travel within the rule of life." It is offered as a serious criticism by Dr. Ernst Faber that "there is wanting in Confucianism a decided and serious tone in its treatment of the doctrine of sin, for, with the exception of moral retribution in social life, it mentions no punishment for sin. It is generally devoid of a deeper insight into sin and evil.... and therefore finds it impossible to explain death!" Though there are obviously defects in the Confucian ethics, Confucius being prone to many of the prejudices of his age, this criticism is born of the conviction of our own self-sufficiency, and expressed in that very worldly Christian understanding of dogmas. It is to the credit of Confucius that he taught virtue for virtue's sake and not for the hope of reward or the fear of punishment.

PRINCE SETS NEW FASHION

Soft Shirt And Collar At Vienna Cabaret

The Prince of Wales recently set a new fashion in Vienna which is being eagerly followed.

One night, wearing a turned-down collar and a soft shirt with his dinner jacket, he spent an enjoyable time dancing at a cabaret called "Noah's Ark."

Vienna's men of fashion were at first startled to see the Prince without the customary "bolled shirt," but before the evening was out some of them had followed his lead.

Clock And Bell Crash

Colchester. The tower, the only remaining portion of the original Tedingd Hall, at Nayland, near Colchester, at one time the seat of the Dukes of Norfolk, was very badly damaged by fire recently. Many ancient oak beams and mural paintings were destroyed, and the bell and the clock in the tower crashed to the ground. The adjoining buildings were saved by the Colchester Fire Brigade.

Tedingd Hall is one of the Suffolk residences of Sir Charles Rowley, and was recently occupied by Lord Davies.

MAN WHO WAS ILL FOR 25 YEARS

But Managed To Keep It Secret

It was revealed at the inquest on the father of Miss Kitty West can win this trick, but the Masters, the B.B.C. crooner, at lead, does him no whit of good. Pendleton, near Manchester, that He can return a Club in the hope he had kept his illness secret for that East had a singleton, and this is won in Dummy and East must follow, whereupon a Spade Lawrence Masterson, 55, a fore-is led. By means of this play, South succeeds in losing only one Spade, one Heart, and one Diamond, and the contract of four Spades is fulfilled.

A post-mortem examination revealed extensive lead poisoning. The verdict was death by misadventure.

Pu Yi's visit to Tokyo will mark the first time that the emperor of any foreign country has visited Japan. In April, 1931, the King of Siam visited Japan, but his visit was an unofficial one.

A 35-year old Chinese male, Tung Chuen, was knocked down by public car No. 222 in Castle Peak Road, near Cheung Sha-wan village, yesterday at 4.30 p.m. The man received injuries to his head and was removed to the Kowloon Hospital.

OF MODERN CHINESE ART

Looking at the pictures it is astonishing to see that, though China has been torn in the past by struggles which often seem inspired by the most barbarous motives, its wisdom and grace still persist.

These contemporary Chinese paintings, particularly perhaps those of Liu Hai-su, show that, despite the evolution of the Kuomintang, Communism, and the Japanese invasion, it is still the dignity and poetry of life which the Chinese value, and they describe their emotions on silk with tenderness only strengthened by the sobriety they have combined with it. — Reuter.

CAMBRIDGE CREW TRIAL

Cambridge had previously covered the same stretch of water in 19 minutes 51 seconds, but were unplaced, whereas the Oxford crew was assisted by four crews rowing in relays.

A feature of Oxford's row was their high rate of stroking, which began at 35 to the minute and finished at 36. The stroke never dropped below 32.

Oxford recorded their last win in 1923, when they beat Cambridge by three-quarters of a length, but great hopes are entertained for a Dark Blues' win next Saturday when the boat-race takes place.

Cambridge hold the course record which was established last year when they clocked 18 minutes 3 seconds to win by 4 1/2 lengths.
